Ike, Macmillan Discuss Cold War Problems

Red Chinese Kill Indian In Clash At Border, Two Riflemen Missing

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—An Indian rifleman was killed by Chinese troops in a border clash north of Longju, in Assam Tuesday, sources close to the Indian government said Saturday.

The rifleman was among 11 members of an Indian border patrol surrounded by Chinese near the Longju outpost. Eight members of the patrol escaped. The fate of the remaining two is not known, the sources said.

Lonju is the outpost which Prime Minister Nehru reported Friday had been surrounded by about 300 Red Chinese who were presumed still in possession of the position. It is in the Subansiri division of Assam.

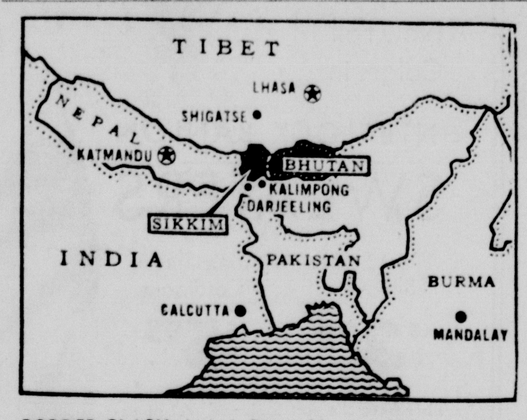

The dead man was said to be a member of the Assam Rifles, a semimilitary organization on border duty. Since the incident, the Indian army has been ordered to take direct charge of defense of the area on India's Northeast Frontier, and Lt. Gen. K. S. Thimayya, army chief of staff, has been put in command.

Defense Ministry sources said Indian army reinforcements were being rushed to Limeking, a larger outpost about five days march from Longju. It was feared the Chinese might next move on Limeking.

The Chinese activity is in a 35,000-square-mile area, known as the Northeast Frontier Agency. It adjoins Tibet.

The Dalai Lama, Tibet's spiritual and temporal ruler, who fled Tibet last March when the Red Chinese bloodily suppressed a Tibetan uprising, escaped through the Northeast Frontier Agency zone, making most of the journey on foot because of the rugged

BORDER CLASH: India's Prime Minister Nehru reports that 200 Chinese Communist troops have invaded Indian territory and captured a number of border posts in fighting with Indian troops. Nehru pinpointed the fighting took place at the Northeast Territory Agency, just below the borders of Tibet and the Indian protectorates of Bhutan and Sikkim. Nehru warned that an attack on either of these protectorates would be considered as an act of aggression against India. (NEA Telephoto)

Urge Free World Mobilize To Meet Communist Threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate document said Saturday night that the United States must mobilize total military and economic resources of the free countries to meet a Soviet threat to control the world.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee published a solemn report recommending pooling of world money and weapons for a struggle that the report said will threaten the world from 10 to 20 years at increasingly heavy costs.

The Russians have a determined, ruthless intention to control the world, the report said, and in view of their rapid industrial growth this is not an idle threat.

The report was prepared by the Corporation for Economic and Industrial Research, Inc., of Arlington, Va., a private research organization, as a part of a major study by the Foreign Relations Committee into U.S. foreign policy around the globe. Dean Arthur E. Burns, chairman of the Graduate Council of George Washington University, supervised its drafting.

Chairman J. W. Fulbright (D-Ark) described the report as one of a series of studies the committee will use as background material in preparing its own final report to the Senate. He said the committee may accept or reject findings and recommendations in the various studies, of which this is the first.

It called for strong measures to increase the economic growth of the United States and its allies to maintain substantial military forces over the years ahead.

On the military front, it urged:

The rapid development of an effective anti-ICBM-missile defense before the Soviet Union achieves one.

Full exploitation of all military applications "of our vast superiority in electronic processing and computer production."

Expansion of capability "to assemble and place quickly, anywhere, by air and sea, highly mechanized and powerful forces to prevent Communist expansion by 'local' conventional warfare."

School, College Enrollment Hits 46,480,000

WASHINGTON (AP)—A record 46,480,000 students will enroll in U.S. schools and colleges during the 1959-60 school year, and even higher enrollments are still to come, the Office of Education reported Saturday.

An increase of 1,750,000 in school enrollment, to 42,700,000 from 40,950,000 in 1958 - 59, will mean an even worse teacher shortage than last year.

The deficit of qualified teachers for the coming year is estimated at 195,000, compared with a shortage of 182,000 in 1958-59.

Mr. Derthick, commissioner of education, said 1959-60 will be the 15th consecutive year in which enrollment has increased. He added this trend, with attendant problems such as the teacher shortage, is likely to continue for many years.

Earlier this month the office made public estimates that there will be a shortage of at least 130,000 public school classrooms when the schools open.

Pentagon Not Big Enough; Propose Another Building

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Pentagon, world's largest office building, is no longer big enough for the Defense Department. Another huge building is now proposed for its activities.

The proposal, disclosed Saturday, came from the General Services Administration, the government's housekeeping agency. It suggested construction begin in 1963-64.

GSA is also proposing for the same period the construction of a new White House office building to replace the old State-War-Navy Building adjacent to the White House. This ornate old building is now officially known as the Executive Offices Building.

The new defense and White House buildings are listed in a revision of the 1956-66 construction program for the Washington area, which was drawn up by GSA at the request of Congress.

Despite the size of the 34-acre Pentagon, the Defense Department now has space in 51 separate buildings. Twenty-two of these are temporary and eight are cataloged as obsolete.

Lightning Kills 5 As Thunderstorms Break Heat Wave

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Lightning killed five persons Saturday as thunderstorms shattered the heat wave in parts of the East Coast and the Great Lakes regions.

One bolt killed a man and his wife and their six-year-old daughter as they attended a church picnic in a grove near Auburn in eastern Pennsylvania.

A golfer in Rumson, N.J., was electrocuted during a storm, and lightning was suspected as causing the death of an umbrella-carrying man who collapsed during a storm over New York City.

At least three others were reported injured by bolts.

Ashburnham, Mass., was drenched by more than two inches of rain, while basements were flooded in Queens, N.J.

Strong wind and hail husked limbs off trees near Ypsilanti, Mich., and heavy rain flooded streets on the outskirts of Detroit. Hail also pelted Fort Wayne, Ind.

In Illinois, Lincoln reported a severe thunderstorm with winds up to 40 miles an hour. A twister was sighted at Herculaneum, Mo., 20 miles south of St. Louis, but no damage was reported.

Despite these scattered storms, hot, muggy weather retained its sticky grip on most states east of the Rockies.

Chicago sweltered through its 11th consecutive day of 90-degree heat—tying two previous record hot spells for the city.

TO PROBE FINANCES OF EAST ST. LOUIS POLICE CHIEF

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (AP)—A certified public accountant will be assigned Monday to make a thorough investigation of the financial affairs of East St. Louis Police Commissioner Russell T. Beebe.

D. W. Costello, assistant state's attorney of St. Clair County and a former Internal Revenue agent, is the accountant assigned to the Beebe case.

State's Atty. John J. Hoban said, "Costello is especially well trained and equipped to get to the bottom of any kind of financial manipulations."

A grand jury last week recommended a renewed investigation of the $545,000 deposited in Beebe's bank account since 1952. The jury also charged that wide open gambling existed through a "system of payoffs" to policemen and city officials; and indicted three men, one a policeman.

Typhoon Lashes Formosa; Advance Gusts Kill Six

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — A monster typhoon with 144-mile winds struck Formosa Saturday night, killing six persons in this Nationalist Chinese capital with advance gusts.

A state of emergency was declared throughout the island, already hard hit by floods and an earthquake earlier this month. The typhoon was described as the worst in the memory of Formosans.

The typhoon, named Joan, had a radius of 200 miles.

As it advanced, thousands of persons fled their flimsy homes in northern Formosa for the greater security of brick buildings.

More than 33,000 persons moved to schools and other public buildings in Taipei. Some 6,600 others were moved to places of greater safety at the nearby port of Keelung.

The typhoon struck between Hualien and Taitung, the two main east coast towns. Hualien is 75 miles southeast of Taipei. Taitung is 90 miles farther south.

The first casualties were recorded in Taipei's suburbs. Police said six persons had been killed and five injured when five homes collapsed.

Winds of 81 miles an hour shrieked through Taipei and were expected to reach 115 m.p.h. Taipei was blacked out by fallen power lines. Houses shuddered as the winds raged. Trees crashed. Fences and signboards blew down.

The many Americans in the Taipei area joined the exodus to places of greater safety.

Railway stations in Japan now have large signs, printed in both English and Japanese, giving the name of the town or city.

Economic Effect Of Steel Strike Slight—Pinch Grows

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department said Saturday the economic effect of the first month of the steel strike, up to mid-August, was slight. But it added the pinch is steadily growing worse.

More job layoffs and adverse economic effects will pile up, the report said, if the strike goes through a second month.

The walkout started July 15 and now is in its 46th day. Already it is the longest steel strike since World War II with the exception of a 59-day walkout in 1952.

The worst steel strike in history was a 169-day affair tying up the entire industry in 1919-1920 after World War I. Another long one, affecting only part of the industry, was the 64-day "Little Steel" strike of 1937.

The present strike has only two weeks to go to outlast the 1952 walkout and become the longest steel labor tie-up of industrywide proportions in recent times—the longest ever except for the 1919 walkout.

Joseph F. Finnegan, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, said here there has been no progress toward a settlement. He has been presiding over peace talks in New York. They are now in recess until Wednesday.

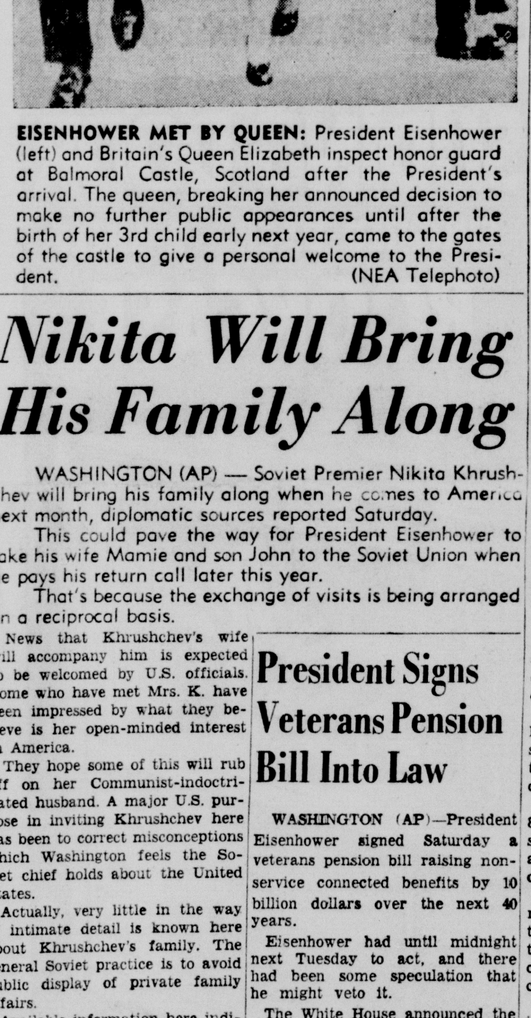

The Labor Department survey made public Saturday said the impact of the present strike has been relatively mild so far. The department's Bureau of Employment Security conducted the survey in 31 steel-producing and consuming areas.

It said most areas reported steel supplies adequate to maintain production at approximately normal levels through mid-September. Growing and possibly serious shortages are expected after that.

By mid-August, the end of the strike's first month, retail sales in steel areas were holding up to high levels, except for some establishments near steel plants which experienced severe losses. The report said the exceptions were most noticeable in the Gary, Ind., portion of the Chicago area and the Sparrows Point section of the Baltimore area.

The government's strike effects report Saturday said 126,000 workers had been idled by mid-August in addition to 500,000 strikers. Close to one-third of the 126,000 layoffs were in the Pittsburgh, Chicago and Cleveland areas.

Applications for federal surplus food allotments were reported rising. Welfare applications were beginning to increase sharply in the steel areas around Chicago, and in Canton and Youngstown, Ohio, and in Pittsburgh and Johnstown, Pa.

Nikita Will Bring His Family Along

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev will bring his family along when he comes to America next month, diplomatic sources reported Saturday.

This could pave the way for President Eisenhower to take his wife Mamie and son John to the Soviet Union when he pays his return call later this year.

That's because the exchange of visits is being arranged on a reciprocal basis.

News that Khrushchev's wife will accompany him is expected to be welcomed by U.S. officials. Some who have met Mrs. K. have been impressed by what they believe is her open-minded interest in America.

They hope some of this will rub off on her Communist-indoctrinated husband. A major U.S. purpose in inviting Khrushchev here has been to correct misconceptions which Washington feels the Soviet chief holds about the United States.

Actually, very little in the way of intimate detail is known here about Khrushchev's family. The general Soviet practice is to avoid public display of private family affairs.

Available information here indicates that Khrushchev's first wife died of natural causes in 1938. In that year he married his present wife, Nadezhda.

Khrushchev has expressed pride in Nadezhda and in the way she has reared his four children, who were born to his first wife.

One son was killed in combat in World War II. He was a pilot.

Surviving are two married daughters, Nadeshda and Julia, and one son, Sergei.

Daughter Nadeshda, in her 40s, is married to Victor Petrovich, Kiev Opera House director.

Julia, about 30, is married to

President Signs Veterans Pension Bill Into Law

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower signed Saturday a veterans pension bill raising non-service connected benefits by 10 billion dollars over the next 40 years.

Eisenhower had until midnight next Tuesday to act, and there had been some speculation that he might veto it.

The White House announced the President had signed the measure at Chequers, the country home of British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan near London, where the two are holding diplomatic discussions.

The bill will have two principal effects when it takes effect July 1, 1960:

1. It will make World War II and Korean War widows eligible for pension on the same basis as World War I widows.

2. It will put the benefits of all veterans and their dependents going on the pension rolls in the future on a sliding scale as determined by need through income limits.

Ike Assures Britain—No Behind The Back Bargains With Soviet

WENDOVER, England (AP) — President Eisenhower gave his pledge to Prime Minister Harold Macmillan Saturday night that the United States will never negotiate with the Soviet Union behind the backs of its Western allies.

The President offered this assurance to the British leader in wide-ranging discussions at Chequers, the country home of British prime ministers. The two Western leaders also got down to considering ways of thawing the cold war by a bold new Western initiative on disarmament.

The Eisenhower-Macmillan exchanges were a prelude to the forthcoming reciprocal visits by the President and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

Presidential press secretary James C. Hagerty told 500 newsmen at a briefing in London that Eisenhower and Macmillan ranged over the "problems caused by Communist movements against the free world."

Hagerty said the President assured Macmillan he plans no negotiations with the Soviet Premier next month. The President said he hopes only to melt the ice of the cold war—a hope he has expressed publicly many times.

Eisenhower and Macmillan — sometimes alone and sometimes with their foreign ministers—ranged over such topics as ways of ending the Berlin crisis, the world arms race and the strengthening of the Western Alliance.

Even as the Eisenhower-Macmillan talks got under way there was word that the President hopes to win British—and general Allied—endorsement of a spectacular new initiative to rid the world of the fear of nuclear war.

Informants said the President already has ordered American experts to seek a fresh approach—with altogether new starting points—toward an accord with the Soviet Union on disarmament.

Protestants Move To Fight Divorce, End Segregation

DENVER (AP) — New Protestant moves were launched Saturday to combat divorce and to stop racial segregation in church and community life.

The actions came in a swift-paced round of resolutions at the international convention of Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ).

Representatives of the two million-member denomination also asserted that churches must speak out clearly on social issues however controversial.

Convention President Dr. John Paul Pack, of Seattle, said the step was aimed at countering attempts to silence the churches on current social questions.

The mass gathering—more than 8,000 strong — declared that the soaring divorce rate has brought about an American marriage crisis.

Besides the actual breakups, the resolution said, "competent authorities estimate that from one-third to one-half of all married couples in the United States are chaffing at the marital bit."

A broadscale program, involving more premarital education, pastoral counseling and special courses in colleges and seminaries, was recommended to curb the trend.

The convention also authorized a program to aid its 8,000 congregations across the country in an intensive study of racial practices, and urged elimination of "segregation and discrimination everywhere."

In the church, the resolution said Christians should "work steadily toward a more inclusive fellowship in Christ of all races at all levels" and for opening of "more channels of fellowship" between Negroes and whites.

Headon Collision Kills Six Near Stromsburg, Neb.

STROMSBURG, Neb. (AP) — Six persons were killed Saturday and three critically injured in a head-on collision about 1½ miles north of Stromsburg on U.S. 81.

Polk County Atty. William H. Norton said both cars were demolished and it was impossible to tell what may have caused the collision.

He identified the dead as:

Joanne Hagg, 20, Dell Rapids, S.D., apparent driver of one car; Janice Breen, 18, Canton, S.D., a passenger; Judy Sunde, 19, Sioux Falls, S.D., a passenger; Victor Jilpas, 16, Mercedes, Tex., apparent driver of the other car; Juan Uresti, 20, Mercedes, Tex., apparently a Mexican national, a passenger, and Domminga Jilpas, 19, Mercedes, Tex., a passenger.

He said the injured were: Joan Madisen, 21, Dell Rapids, S.D.; Esther Jilpas, 17, Mercedes, Tex.; Ernesto Uresti, 16, Mercedes, Tex., also a Mexican national.

See Chance To Avoid Meat Packers Strike

CHICAGO (AP)—Hopes of avoiding a strike in the meat packing industry rose a bit Saturday.

Armour & Co. continued negotiations with two AFL-CIO unions, the United Packinghouse Workers and the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen.

The weekend session heightened the possibility an agreement on a new contract may be reached before the current three-year contracts with packing firms expire at midnight Monday.

Armour employs 14,000 members of the two unions in 27 plants across the country.

The federal government moved to head off a strike in meat processing plants.

The Mediation and Conciliation Service announced conferences have been scheduled for 2 p.m. Monday with leaders of the unions and representatives of Swift & Co. and Wilson & Co.

Union spokesmen, in a bid for federal intervention, told the mediation service Friday talks with Swift and Wilson were deadlocked.

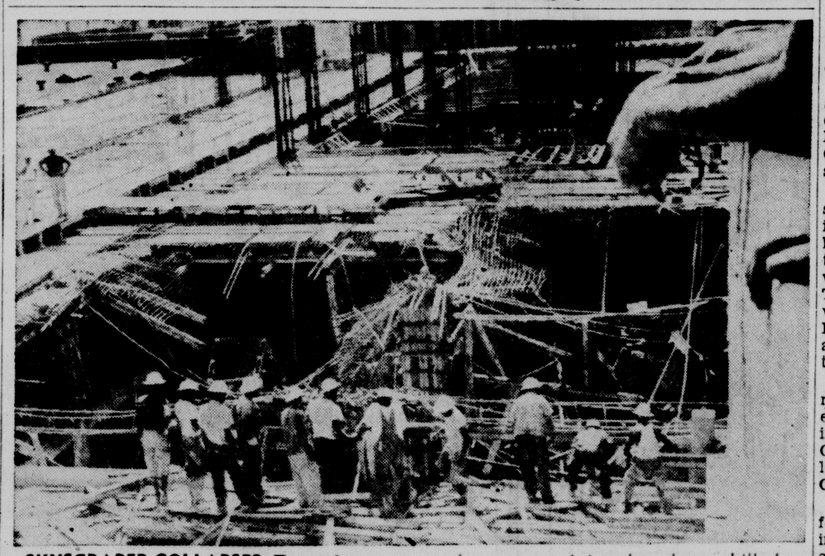

Commissioners William Murray and Douglas Brown were assigned to the job of trying to bring about an agreement.

Retirement Of 3 Marine Corps Generals Threatens To Rock Boat Of Top Command

WASHINGTON (AP)—The high command of the Marine Corps appears to be coming apart at the seams.

Of the Marines' five lieutenant generals, three have announced their intention to retire Nov. 1, while a fourth is said to be debating similar action.

These four hold the top command in the corps under the present commandant, Gen. Randolph McC. Pate, who retires Dec. 31.

There is some indication that personal chagrin, if not anger, played a part in the decision of the three to retire now.

The departure of the three, none of whom has reached the compulsory retirement age of 62, will strip the Marines of considerable fighting and executive talent.

On Aug. 12, President Eisenhower announced he was jumping Maj. Gen. David M. Shoup over nine senior officers to the four-star rank of Commandant effective Jan. 1. Shoup won the Medal of Honor on Tarawa in 1943.

Fifteen days later there was a brief White House announcement that the three lieutenant generals were retiring. As usual, no reason was given.

The three are Edwin A. Pollock, 60, commander, Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic, Norfolk, Va.; Merrill B. Twining, 57, commandant Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va.; and Vernon E. Megee, 59, commander, Fleet Marine Force, Pacific, Honolulu.

Lt. Gen. Berne J. McCaul, 56, now assistant commandant, is reported to be considering retirement Nov. 1. There has been no indication of what course Lt. Gen. Robert Hogaboom, chief of staff, might pursue.

Initially it was assumed the three simply wanted their "tombstone" promotions.

Under a 34-year-old law, repealed as of next Nov. 1, combat-decorated Marine and Navy officers are given honorary promotions upon retirement, although they receive no extra pay. The higher rank may be used on their tombstones.

Then McGee put the fat in the fire Friday. He said: "I'm naturally disappointed because I didn't get the commandant's job. So are some of the other senior officers."

Neither Pollock, Twining nor McCaul could be reached for comment.

Questions to Marine spokesmen about McGee's statement produced nervous laughter, but nothing else. While the retirement of the three, according to McGee, seemed based on personal disappointment, those close to the corps in recent years have been convinced Marines are not running an exactly "happy ship."

Shoup will inherit a corps cut by the Department of Defense from 27 to 21 fighting battalions and struggling to meet manpower commitments in the Mediterranean and the Pacific.

What Would You Show Nikita When He Arrives For Visit?

By SAUL PETT
Associated Press Writer

America, salesman to the world, faces a historic sales problem at home.

The problem: to sell itself not to a customer but to an avowed competitor and potential enemy.

What can we show Nikita Khrushchev that would begin to shake his prejudices and misconceptions about us? How can we give him an insight into what America is all about?

How, in 12 days, can we begin to persuade him of our enduring strength and peaceful purpose, that most of us live well and without fear, that our workers are not oppressed, that some of us may have profound complaints but few of us have any desire to change the form of our political democracy, that the sore spots we have are sore spots, not cancer?

Assuming that the best face we can show him is an honest one, that the best argument for America includes the good and the bad, what would you show Premier Khrushchev when he comes to this country next month?

This question was asked by The Associated Press across the country, in a variety of places, of a variety of well-known persons with a wide range of basic viewpoints.

Eleanor Roosevelt, who herself interviewed Khrushchev last year, said:

"I would hope, of course, that he is shown, without comment, some of our factories and our homes on different economic levels. We should not hide the bad, but also we should try to show him some of our progress.

"He should have an opportunity to talk with individual Americans to observe the pride in what they themselves have accomplished."

Earl Browder, who left the American Communist party 13 years ago after heading it for 15 years, said:

"The two things that would impress him most are the wage scales of American workers and their homes. For years, Marxist dogma has gone into all sorts of contortions trying to explain away American wages and living standards but it continues to puzzle them."

Dr. I. I. Rabi, Columbia University physicist:

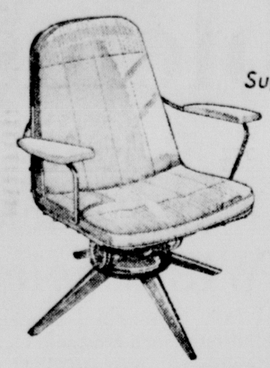

"I would simply drive him right across the country. He would see great varieties of people and places and yet he would grasp the sameness and immensity. He would get a more intuitive understanding of our country that way."

David Murray, a striking steelworker in Pittsburgh:

"Show Khrushchev the suburbs around here and any home and the TV set, the refrigerator, the car we all have. Show him the steel mills and the picket lines and a union meeting. Show him how we have fun, even us strikers. Show him Kennywood amusement park, where a lot of us have been taking our kids during the strike."

Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, who saw Khrushchev in action during Vice President Richard M. Nixon's visit to the Soviet Union, said:

"I would like for Premier Khrushchev to spend a day or two with a farmer and to visit a PTA meeting, a city council meeting, to attend one or two church sessions, a union meeting and also to visit one or two really small agricultural and industrial cities where he would be a guest of local civic groups and hear a typical program."

HARKER HALL READY FOR MEN

A 50-year-old women's dormitory, refurnished and redecorated, is inspected here by President Louis W. Norris (right), and Spencer Lane, Director of Admissions, as it is prepared for MacMurray's 114th year Sept. 20.

Harker Hall, named in honor of Dr. Joseph R. Harker, president from 1893 to 1925, will be used to house a portion of more than 300 men expected to report next month for the third year of MacMurray College for Men. The admissions director estimates that total enrollment in both colleges will exceed 800, highest in MacMurray history.

A large student lounge area and a few classrooms also will be located in Harker Hall, whose refurbishing is under the direction of Mrs. Joseph Cleeland, wife of the chairman of the music department. She has supervised MacMurray College interior decorating for several years.

"Merely Temporary"

Use of Harker Hall as a men's dormitory is termed "merely temporary" by President Louis W. Norris. It had been used in the past as a dormitory for MacMurray women, and in recent years to house student nurses undergoing special training at the Jacksonville State Hospital.

A five-story building, it was constructed when the increase in MacMurray enrollment in 1909 made more space essential. On the top three floors of Harker were dormitory rooms; on the two lower, classrooms and laboratories. Elevator service installed in Harker led to frequent insistence through the student newspaper on elevator etiquette and proper respect and precedence to upperclassmen.

The building was refurbished in the summers of 1935 and 1936, along with Main Hall, with Sen. James MacMurray donating more than one-half the cost of $28,000.

Will Live In 3rd Dorm

Men will be housed in Harker Hall until the third new dormitory is constructed, which according to Dr. Norris will be in time for the fourth class of men in September, 1960. Similar in architecture to Blackstock and Norris Houses—the first two men's dorms—the third building will be located immediately north of Blackstock on Hardin avenue.

Speaks Sept. 6 At W. Jacksonville Parish Churches

Dr. Claude M. Temple of Decatur will be guest speaker in the churches of the West Jacksonville Methodist parish on Sunday, Sept. 6.

Hours of the services will be Wesley Chapel 9 a.m., Riggston 10 a.m. and Ebenezer 11 a.m.

DR. CLAUDE M. TEMPLE

Dr. Temple is the executive secretary of the Preachers' Aid Society of the Illinois Conference of the Methodist church. This Society administers one of the oldest and strongest endowment funds of the church. Nearly 300 retired ministers or widows of ministers derive a large share of their pension income from the proceeds of this fund.

Rev. Fines D. Main, pastor of the West Parish Methodist church said that Dr. Temple will not take an offering, but that he has been invited to the local pulpit as part of a plan to inform members about the different benevolent interests of the church.

Dr. Temple is a graduate of the University of Illinois and of Boston University School of Theology where he received both Bachelor's and Master's degrees in theology. Subsequently the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon him by Illinois Wesleyan University.

The Illinois Conference elected Dr. Temple as a delegate to the last two General Conferences of the denomination held in San Francisco and in Minneapolis, as well as the last three Jurisdictional Conferences.

Prior to a term as superintendent of the Peoria District, Dr. Temple served as pastor of various churches through a ministry of 35 years. Currently he is serving under the appointment of Bishop Charles W. Brashares of the Illinois Area on the State Board of Institutional Chaplaincies which provides chaplains for prisons, hospitals, etc.

Dr. Temple has served as a member of the Boards of Trustees of the Methodist Hospital of Central Illinois in Peoria, the Wesley Foundation at Urbana, the Methodist Sunset Home in Quincy, the Baby Fold in Normal, and the Chanute Foundation in Rantoul.

Mrs. Temple, who will accompany Dr. Temple, is a daughter of the late Rev. Edward D. Champion of Mattoon.

Christian Church Opens Six-Day Meet In Denver

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — A multitude of church people convened here Friday as representatives of a denomination that never wanted to be one.

In fact, many still shun the term.

But as the International Convention of Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ) opened, it had become America's largest native church.

"Sometimes it's frightfully frustrating," said church historian Dr. Howard E.Short, "that by a twist of fate we became what we set out to diminish — an additional group."

More than 8,000 men and women, clergymen and plain churchgoers are here for the six-day mass assembly, which marks the 150th anniversary of their founding idea.

It was, as voiced by "old light" Thomas Campbell back in 1809, the belief that church divisions hurt the cause, and that all Christians should share fellowship.

But in the tide of history, the movement to reduce the denominational cleavages became itself another Protestant body, largest of U.S. origin.

It has about two million members, predominantly in the Midwest, Southwest and on the West Coast, in more than 8,000 congregations.

"However, many still won't use the word, 'denomination,'" said Dr. Short, of St. Louis, editor of the church's official organ, Christian Evangelist — Front Rank. "Their favorite term is brotherhood."

"But we're as much adenominational as any other separate body," he added. "You start with an idea, people follow, and there you are—you're another denomination."

The church, however, still upholds its founding principle that theological interpretations should not be allowed to keep Christians apart.

It avoids prescribed creedal definitions, leaving such matters open to individual interpretation, and welcomes to baptism and the Lord's table anyone who simply professes Christ as the Son of God.

The church also has taken a lead in national and world interdenominational efforts for Christian unity.

FOR THE KIDDIES

Your small fry might enjoy an old-fashioned dish called Goldenrod Eggs. To make it, add the whites of hard-cooked eggs to a medium white sauce and pour over hot buttered toast. Put the hard-cooked yolks in a fine-mesh wire strainer and press through with a wooden spoon. Sprinkle the sieved yolks over the toast and sauce for the goldenrod effect?

Miss Aldrich, Michael Murphy United In Garden Ceremony At Bride's Parents Home

PITTSFIELD—One of the outstanding weddings in Pittsfield this summer occured at four o'clock Sunday afternoon, August twenty-third in the garden of the C. W. Aldrich home when their daughter, Elizabeth Ann, became the bride of Michael Edward Murphy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Murphy of Highland Park, Bloomington, Illinois.

The Reverend Ernest Duhling, pastor of the Methodist church, officiated for the service attended by a large gathering of friends and relatives.

Organ selections were heard during the prelude with Mrs. Harold Capps accompanying the soloist, Miss Karen Willsey.

An archway at the rear of the lovely garden was covered with white mums, carnations and greenery and flanked with candelabra and standards holding more white blossoms.

White ribbon bordered the improvised aisle for the wedding party also marked with ivy and floral bouquets in standards, and potted chrysanthemums.

The bride chose her sister, Peggy, as her maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Ann Kinsey, Fort Meyers, Florida, a sorority sister; Miss Deanann Harren, San Pedro, California; Miss Sally Aldrich, another sister of the bride and Miss Judy Burrougns, Bloomington.

John Eichorn was best man. Ushers and groomsmen were Burton Costello, Robert Bassarich, Ronald Bergamar and Donald Halloway, all of Bloomington.

Wears Lace and Tulle

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a Chapel length gown of Chantilly lace and tulle over slipper satin. The portrait neckline was outlined with appliqued lace motif and the snug bodice had long sleeves of lace.

The bouffant tulle skirt featured a wide band of hand clipped lace encircling the skirt. The bride's waistlength veil of silk illusion fell from a Swedish crown. She carried a cascade bouquet of stephanotis, with valley lily centered with a white orchid.

The attendants were gowned identically in opera green taffeta sheath dresses with tulle overskirts. The bodices were made with scoop cut necklines and brief sleeves. Each carried a white lace umbrella sans bouquets.

Silk Organza Gown

Wells Fargo Keeps Museum As Reminder Of Wild Youth

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Nowadays when California's Wells Fargo wants to move its money, it calls in a commercial armored car service like any other bank.

But just to remind itself of the compan's rootin', tootin' past, the bank keeps a museum in the heart of San Francisco's financial district. It has a stagecoach in mint condition, a large collection of six-guns and other mementoes of a wild youth.

Wells Fargo Bank started as a sideline for Wells, Fargo & Co., the hardest riding express firm the world ever saw. The express business vanished by congressional order into the American Railway Express during World War I.

Gerald W. Wickland, a bank vice president who didn't want the past forgotten, started the museum.

Youngsters looking over the stagecoach in the museum tell Irene Simpson, the curator, that it's a lot larger than they had expected. A Wells Fargo stage seated nine people inside and five on the roof — and you had to step away up to get in.

One addition the bank would like to make to its records is the after-prison history of Charles E. Bolton, the most enterprising road agent who ever robbed a Wells Fargo stage.

Bolton left doggerel poetry at each holdup scene, signing himself Black Bart. Before he was finally captured, he had stopped 28 Wells Fargo stages.

Wells Fargo has not heard one word about him since his parole following a four-year stretch in San Quentin Prison, although it ordered its agents to keep an eye peeled for him for years.

On his 28th job, between Sonora and Copperopolis in the mother lode country, he was chased away by gunfire from a passing hunter and dropped a handkerchief. J. B. Hume, famous Wells Fargo detective, found a laundry mark on the handkerchief and through it traced the notorious robber to a San Francisco rooming house.

Hume's records prove that the holdup business was quite brisk in these parts between 1870 and 1884. During that time bandits and burglars took $415,312 from Wells Fargo in 313 stage robberies, 23 burglaries and 4 train robberies.

Hume and his colleagues were a busy lot also, obtaining 240 convictions, killing five men who were trying to rob stages and 11 who were trying to escape. Hume notes that seven robbers were "hanged by citizens."

What does the bank think about movies and TV portrayals of the business founded in 1852 by Henry Wells of Thetford, Vt., and William George Fargo of Pompey, N.Y.? T. T. Townsend, advertising manager, thinks that all-in-all it's a pretty good thing.

"Wells Fargo made its name by making good to customers when the stages were robbed," he explains. And besides, the bank can't do a thing about it—the name is public property, so long as it is not applied to the bank, he adds.

Townsend, of course, doesn't know how Wells Fargo of New York feels about television portrayals. That company, which operates armored cars and also an express business to South America has the same roots but has no connection with the San Francisco firm.

TV NEWS
by DON SHUMAKER

Most of the ardent fans of Ricky Nelson, Edd Byrnes, Pat Boone, Elvis Pressley and Fabian have never had the opportunity of watching an old-time vaudeville show. Radio entertainment and the arrival of "talking" motion pictures brought about vaudeville's decline during the 1930's. From its humble origin in barrooms, vaudeville came to the main attraction in hundreds of theatres throughout the U. S. and Canada between the 1880's and 1930's. It's greatest center was New York's Palace Theatre, which became the goal of every vaudeville act. A few of the top stars who played there were George Burns, Gracie Allen, Weber & Fields, Eva Tanguary, George M. Cohan, Mae West, Harry Houdini, W. C. Fields, Will Rogers, Eddie Cantor, the Marx Brothers and Fred Allen.

"A Night At The Palace," starring George Burns and guest starring Jack Benny, will be one of 39 Tuesday night special colorcasts during the 1959-60 season over the NBC-TV Network. In addition to a half dozen of the established stars who played in the Palace, this one-hour-long show will also star six of the current stars who probably would play the Palace were vaudeville there today. Both Burns and Benny got their start in vaudeville more than three decades ago, Jack Benny appearing on stage in diapers, of course. Otherwise, how could he still be only 39?

Calhoun Apple Festival And Fair At Hardin Sept. 25-27

HARDIN—A tentative program has been adopted for the 13th annual Calhoun County Apple Festival and Fair, which will be an event of Sept. 25, 26 and 27, at the fair grounds on the north edge of Hardin. The festival and fair is sponsored by the Calhoun Apple Advertising Club and Fair Association, and work is now being done at the site in an effort to arrange for all events of the fair, including the Sunday parade, to take place on the grounds.

Activities on Friday, the first day of the fair, will include the judging of apples, the arranging of the livestock entries, and a big western horse show at 7:30 p.m. Judge for the horse show will be John Woods, president of the Illmo Association, the recognized western horse show association of Illinois and Missouri, and the show's announcer will be Bob Reese of Jerseyville. A similar show at the 1958 festival created so much interest CAAC officials said, that it was decided to continue the practice. The CAAC has become a member of the ILIMO Association, and its rules will govern this show.

At 9 a.m. on Saturday the livestock will be judged, and at 1:30 p.m. there will be a horse pulling contest, also in its second year, and returning because of audience demand. As in former years, there will be almost continuous free entertainment on the stage, and Saturday's program includes the "Duke of Paducah," the "Grand Ole Opry" show, and other recording artists. Apple queen contestants will make two appearances on the stage Saturday night, the first at 8 p.m. and the final appearance at 10 p.m. Judges will select a queen following an afternoon tea and these two stage appearances, but her name will not be disclosed until the 9 p.m. coronation Sunday night.

Al Mack, well known M.C. and comedian from St. Louis, will entertain on the stage Sunday afternoon from 2 until time for the Grand Parade at 2:30. Following the parade, a band concert is scheduled at 3:30, and this will be followed by state acts for the remainder of the afternoon and early evening. At 4:15 p.m., the Engfords, "upside down marvels," will perform and at 4:30 novelty acts will be presented by Seabold and Seiler. There will be organ music from 5 until 6 p.m., when the Jackie Hill orchestra will appear, and at 7:30 acrobatic acts will be presented.

The coronation of the queen will take place at 9 p.m. Sunday, and this will be followed by a stage show until late in the evening. A carnival, with rides and concessions will be on hand each day, and the usual apple products will be available at all times.

Music Association Will Bring Notable Attractions To City

Ticket sales for the Jacksonville-MacMurray Music Association concert series will be conducted entirely by mail this year, with the deadline Sept. 11.

Mrs. Frank B. Norbury, in making this announcement Saturday, said that the 1959-60 program promises once again to be as outstanding as it has been in recent years.

A return engagement by the world reknown St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, which played to an overflow house at ISD last February 10, is included in this season's series. The brilliant Roger Wagner Chorale will be one of the additions this year, with a concert scheduled for March 1, 1960, in Annie Merner Chapel.

One of today's leading sopranos, Imgaard Seefried, will present a concert also in Merner Chapel, Nov. 23, 1959, followed by the pianist, George Demus, Jan. 5, 1960.

No Personal Contacts

A letter of invitation to this year's series has already been sent to last year's members, with provision for replying with the enclosed ticket order. Mrs. Norbury emphasized that this will be the only opportunity to purchase tickets, since no personal contacts will be made in the community as in past years. In addition, she said, membership will be limited to assure comfortable seating for all.

Membership in the association entails purchasing of a ticket, with that ticket covering all concerts. Prices are $6.00 for each season's membership for adults, and $5.00 for students (through grade 12.)

It is again emphasized that all subscriptions be received by Sept. 11. Orders will be accepted in the order in which they are received, with the campaign closed when seating capacity is reached. Checks are to be made payable to the Jacksonville - MacMurray Music Association.

If further information is desired, telephone CH 5-6809. Headquarters will be in the lobby of the Hotel Dunlap.

WINDOW WONDERLAND

Three basic ingredients go into today's recipe for a well-planned home—large, expansive windows to give an outdoor-indoor look functional furniture, and room arrangements that make the most of every inch of available space, take full advantage of all the architectural assets and camouflage faulty features.

We are indebted to the Modernists for emphasis on large windows and walls of glass, but this by no means limits their use in homes of other styles. In fact, today's clever homeplanner borrows the best of Modern, Traditional and Provincial and combines them to create a livable, comfortable, attractive home.

Sketched above is a room with large window walls that look out on a scene of enchantment. Provincial furniture was chosen for this room to tie in with the knotty pine surfaces of dado and window frames. Snug wall-to-wall carpeting makes for easy upkeep.

Note how the fabric of the gay-colored valance has been pasted on the area above the windows to give a novel, colorful effect. (Fabric can be easily pasted to walls with vegetable glue.) Basic colors are blue and yellow which combine beautifully with the natural wood tones.

We offer you a varied selection of fine furnishings—attractive blendable pieces that will live in perfect harmony with what you already have in your home. Do come in and browse through our showrooms and see the many decorator-type pieces that we've carefully selected with You in mind. Soon now!

Receives Top Civilian Award

Lady Scientist's Food Research Means Good Health

By ALICIA HART,
NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)— A lot of the credit for your family's strong, robust health goes to a soft-spoken, gray-haired lady scientist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

She is Dr. Hazel K. Stiebeling, director of the Institute of Home Economics and one of the nation's top nutrition experts. Her research concerning what foods a person needs to maintain good health is considered so outstanding that she was recently given the President's Award for Distinguished Federal-Civilian Service.

This gold medal honor is the highest that can be given to a civilian government employe. Dr. Stiebeling is the forst woman to receive it.

In addition to performing valuable scientific research on the nutritional benefits of vitamins and minerals, she has directed nationwide studies of America's eating habits. Information gained from her projects has helped correct serious dietary deficiencies and contributed to the increased consumption of body-building foods like milk, fruits and green vegetables.

Dr. Stiebeling went to work for the Department of Agriculture in 1930 when the U. S. was undergoing the hardships of the depression. As her first project, she devised special food guides to help people with limited budgets maintain healthful diets.

Since then she has originated similar food plans which show how beneficial meals can be prepared for relatively little money. "Price is not an index of nutritional value," she says.

Such studies played a large part in the creation of the national school lunch program. Housewives can obtain other food budget plans, like Dr. Stiebeling's popular "Food for Fitness," by writing the Department of Agriculture's information division.

Among Dr. Stiebeling's current research projects are the effects that modern commercial producing and processing techniques have on nutritonal value of foods. Also under study are the nutritional aspects of fats. This investigation is considered especially important since fats have been linked with heart disease.

Dr. Stiebeling was born in Haskins, Ohio, and received her bachelor's, master's and PhD degrees from Columbia University in New York. Before going to work for the Department of Agriculture, she taught nutrition at Kansas State Teachers' College and was an assistant in nutrition and later research assistant in chemistry at Columbia.

In addition to promoting better eating habits in the United States, she has helped improve dietary conditions in many foreign countries. As a member of U. S. delegations to the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, Dr. Stiebeling has attended practically all major international foods and nutrition conferences held during the past 20 years.

Dr. Stiebeling says she loves to cook but doesn't enjoy cooking just for herself. Since she lives alone, she admits she often eats her dinners in a restaurant.

Dr. Stiebeling is especially pleased about what she believes is a renaissance in cooking. She explains that modern kitchen labor-saving devices have prompted more women to take an interest in cooking healthful, tasty meals that are attractive. But she doesn't restrict this new enthusiasm to just women.

"I think a new family interest is developing in food and food preparation," she says. An example, she explains is the growing number of men who can be seen on weekends cooking over back yard barbecue pits.

Scientists Now Hint Of Total Victory In Fight On Diabetes

By JOHN BARBOUR
Associated Press Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Now come the first hints of total victory over diabetes.

The disease is a failure in fueling the body engine. The body is unable to burn sugar for energy, and consequently the diabetic's body becomes starved for energy — while it is glutted with unusuable sugar.

Only 40 years ago, the patient had two choices—a harsh, lifetime diet—or death. Sometimes there was no choice at all.

Today the diabetic has insulin to keep the disease in check. And now there are new pills—orinase, diabinase and DBI—that doctors prescribe to control diabetes and keep sugar levels down. More than half a million Americans use the pills today.

Still newer are highly sensitive tests to seek out persons who are susceptible to diabetes, but as yet show none of the overt signs.

Drs. Stefan S. Fajans and Jerome W. Conn of the University of Michigan using these tests have found hidden diabetes in young people. They were able to head off symptoms of the disease by treating with the oral drug orinase.

The disease was first noted and treated by the Egyptians 3,500 years ago — without success.

Its victims were plagued by insatiable thirst. They lost weight. Above all they were always tired. Some developed blurry vision, boils or itching skin.

But what caused these strange symptoms was a mystery. The first real hints came in the late 1800's when medical researchers found that removal of a small gland called the pancreas from the abdomen of dogs caused diabetes-like symptoms. The pancreas produces digestive juices.

In 1920, a Canadian scientist, Dr. Frederick G. Banting, and a medical student, Charles H. Best, set themselves to finding the secret of the pancreas.

By the next summer they had isolated insulin and tried it on diabetic dogs with success. In 1922 the first human patient was treated with insulin, with success.

But the discovery of insulin, was far from a full solution. There are dangers to insulin therapy. Diet, in some cases, was still required.

Then French scientists searching for a drug against typhoid, stumbled on a sister to the sulfa drugs.

When this drug was used on typhoid patients, they suddenly fell into coma—a symptom of insulin shock. Had the drugs created too much insulin in their systems?

German scientists a few years later developed a similar drug. Both seemed to lower blood sugar levels. But significantly they didn't work in animals from which the pancreas had been removed.

Now some doctors postulated: suppose that someting in this sulfa-type drug had released insulin from the pancreas. But this is only theory thus far.

With perfection, the first oral drug, orinase, was put into practice in the United States in 1957. It was much more convenient than insulin. But it didn't work in every case.

New improvements are being made. Among the most hopeful signs is the control of diabetes in youngsters before it really becomes severe.

Arenzville Prepares For Two Day Burgoo

ARENZVILLE—Elza Perry, burgoo-maker whose recipe was once requested and sent to the White House, is now in the midst of arrangements for making 24 kettles of the burgoo to satisfy guests at the two-day Arenzville burgoo and homecoming September 2-3.

While Perry will again be in charge of the actual cooking, a large crew of volunteers will be on hand in the Arenzville Town Park Tuesday evening, peeling bushels of potatoes, carrots and onions.

"You should see that gang work!" remarked Harry Dufelmeier, chairman of the procurement committee, whose responsibility it is to see that enough choice beef, chickens and vegetables are ready in appropriate amounts to produce 1500 gallons of soup."

"We expect to sell more soup at the kettles this year than ever before," continued Mr. Dufelmeier. "Service will start at eleven o'clock on both Wednesday and Thursday and continue until we are sold out. We will furnish as many containers as possible but it would be a good idea to bring your own if you want to be sure to get some for your freezer."

The Arenzville burgoo is unique in that it is sponsored by three organizations, Community Club, Legion and A.T.A., all working together for the good of the community.

Entertainment, both professional and amateur, has been carefully selected for the enjoyment of the entire family, programs being scheduled for the afternoon and evening of both days. Many rides and concessions will be available. Ample parking facilities have been provided at the ball park.

Honor David Reeve At Philmont Scout Ranch

David Reeve, the son of Mr. & Mrs. John Reeve, 660 S. Prairie, a member of Post No. 107 of the Grace Methodist church, has just returned from a four week training course at the Philmont Boy Scout Ranch Cimmaron, New Mexico.

David was elected by the Boy Scouts Committee of Troop No. 107 to take Junior Leadership training at Philmont and upon the completion of this course, he is to take over the duties of Junior Assistant Scout Master of Boy Scout Troop No. 107.

Scout David Reeve

This is the third boy that the Grace Methodist Church has sponsored, the first being John Hamilton, second, Gary Cook and third, David Reeve.

Eagle Scout

David is an Eagle Scout receiving his Eagle Scout in Boy Scou Troop No. 107. He is a senior a Jacksonville High School and is on the school football team. This is David's 2nd trip to Philmont, the first being a camping and hiking trip and this one training for leadership. David reported to Philmont, July 31, at which time the group immediately went to Cimmaroncito, base camp. A boy was picked temporarily for Senior Patrol Leader over a group of 35 boys. After the boys got to know each other better, an election was held and David was elected Senior Patrol Leader of the group, highest position held by a boy. He served in this capacity for the full time of the training.

The troop committee, in considering David to represent Troop No. 107, at Philmont, and for taking this training, took into consideration his Eagle Rank, participation in troop activities, religious activities and scholastic standing in school.

The junior leadership training received at Philmont stressed Scouting skills, methors of instruction, patrol method. New ideas in scouting were presented to the boys, prior to literature. In turn the boys expressed their opinions and ideas to be taken back to the National Boy Scout office in the interest of making new policies in the future and in this manner keeping scouting abreast.

Sponsor Sales To Buy Sick Room Equipment

American Legion Auxiliary, Unit 279, announces the start of its annual magazine subscription campaign. Mrs. Edith McMahan, unit chairman said that the commissions derived from sponsoring the plan will be used for the purchase of additional portable sick room equipment to be added to the already established sick room equipment loan cabinet, for the use of patients in their own homes.

When received this new equipment will be housed in Jacksonville, so as to most conveniently serve the residents of the various communities, and will be made readily available for temporary use in the homes of all residents without charge except for the transportation.

As in past years only accredited representatives of the publishers, each bearing letters of authorization and identification, will call on residents to explain the plan in full detail. These letters will bear signatures of officers and members of the American Legion Auxiliary. All representatives working on the campaign will be registered at the county sheriff's office.

It was stated by officers in full charge of the campaign that the plan will be considered as a community service project and not as a request for donations. Donations will not be accepted by either the representatives working on the campaign or the American Legion Auxiliary. Everyone co-operating will receive full value in well known magazine subscriptions.

Through this same type plan in past years it has been possible to purchase sick room equipment for residents of Morgan county. This equipment has rendered valuable and timely service to the residents of this community. Continued co-operation by all county residents will be greatly appreciated by the American Legion Auxiliary.

Chicago Livestock Market Report

CHICAGO (AP)—The decline in butcher hog prices this week was the steepest in eight months although total offerings were among the smallest in more than a year.

At the 12 major markets, however, supplies were greater than they had been for nine weeks.

Most of the week's setback of $1.00-1.50 for butcher hogs occurred on Friday as offerings increased and were moderately above other recent Fridays.

The prolonged market weakness was ascribed to a dull hot weather trade for pork. Some pork cuts sagged as much as $4.00 for the week.

The $14.50 peak price on Friday was the lowest in a month.

Sows were 50 to 75 cents lower.

The cattle supply was about 15 per cent smaller than a week ago but the percentage of slaughter steer offerings remained about the same and that class was strong to 75 cents higher.

The smaller marketing was linked with hot weather and the fact that during the previous week prices of slaughter steers and heifers slumped to new lows for the year.

Spring slaughter lambs sagged as much as $1.00 a hundredweight although offerings on the sheep market were down about 35 per cent from the week earlier. Other market totals increased.

CHICAGO (AP) — (USDA) — Here is a summary of the hog, cattle and sheep markets for the week with estimated receipts for today:

New York Stock Market

By ED MORSE

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market this week posted its first weekly gain in four weeks as it did some discounting of a future steel strike settlement.

That, and expectations of booming fourth quarter profits, were cited as factors in the moderate, speculative rise. Total turnover sank to 10,505,034 shares from 11,762,210 the previous week. Both weeks were the lightest since the week ended April 11, 1958 when 10,376,640 shares were traded.

One session, Thursday, accounted for the week's net gain. The trading element began to discount the bullish effect of an eventual end to the steel strike. Some of the steels and motors went to new highs for the year. Aluminum and a wide variety of other stocks climbed aboard the bandwagon.

The gains were fair enough to satisfy many speculators and they cashed them in in a mixed Friday session which found the popular averages drooping slightly and volume more than half a million shares below that of the previous session.

Enough uncertainties remained in the international scene and the domestic economy to prevent the street from taking off into the wild blue yonder. The Thursday rally, in fact, was accomplished despite a warning against "false optimism" issued by the head of the United Steelworkers.

Rising interest rates, including a hike in the U.S. Treasury's short-term borrowing costs to their highest level in 25 years provided no encouragement to stock buyers.

The preview showing of 1960 models by American Motors and optimistic official statements from the firm served as a spark for automotive shares.

Corporate and U.S. Government bonds declined sharply, with the governments sinking to historic lows.

Trading declined to $22,524,000 par value on the New York Stock Exchange for the week from $24,811,000 the previous period and $23,318,000 a year ago.

WHEAT CLOSES WEEK HIGHER, SOYBEANS PRICES DECLINE

By Gil Mayo
AP Business News Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Two significant influences worked their way through the grain futures market this week. One boosted wheat futures prices on the Board of Trade, the other was bearish and weakened soybeans.

Except for a few spots, other grains shifted only fractions of a cent from the closes a week ago.

The bullish factor, one of the strongest in several weeks to hit wheat, was the government report that at the end of July almost 108 million bushels of the 1959 crop already had gone into government loan under the price support program.

The bearish influence was a succession of reports that the soybean crop had improved considerably since August 1 and that the outlook is for a yield considerably above earlier prospects.

Following release of the government loans on wheat, prices galloped ahead as much as 2¾ cents a bushel in one day. However, prices steadied somewhat at the higher figures and except for scattered pressure from time to time thereafter pretty well maintained the advances. Some deliveries finished the week about a cent below their peaks.

Dealers bid the prices up on the possibility that movement of wheat into the loan could, with additional such commitments, bring free supplies into fairly even balance with commercial requirements.

The loan figure was encouraging to the trade because it was somewhat larger than at the same time a year ago when production was greater.

At the end of the week, wheat was ½-1¾ cents a bushel higher than a week ago, September $1,-90-¼; Corn ½-2⅛ lower with the extreme setback on September at $1.16¾-⅞; oats ⅛ lower to 1 cent higher, September new type contract 66⅜-¼; rye ⅜ higher to 2¼ lower, September $1.29⅜-⅝; soybeans 1⅞-2½ lower, September $2.08½-⅝.

ESTIMATED RECEIPTS

CHICAGO (AP)—Estimated livestock receipts for Monday are 9,000 hogs, 20,000 cattle and 1,500 sheep.

LOAF PAN DEFINED

Does your recipe call for a "loaf pan?" Nowadays this means a rather narrow deep rectangular pan with slightly sloping sides.

Redhead May Ride Bench If Avila Stays Hot

By JERRY UDWIN

CHICAGO (AP) — The Redhead's coming back, but where'll the Braves put him?

Possibly on the bench, if Bobby Avila, Red Schoendienst's latest and most satisfactory replacement at second base, continues his current hot hitting.

Doctors have told Schoendienst and his Milwaukee Braves teammates he may rejoin the team Tuesday. Tuberculosis has kept him out of the Braves' lineup all season.

Manager Fred Haney said Friday he doesn't know how quickly Red will be ready to play, especially fulltime.

Avila, curly-haired lead-off man traded to Milwaukee from Boston July 21, has given the Braves' infield a tremendous boost since he joined the club. In the last four games, he has smacked out nine hits including three-for-five Friday against the Chicago Cubs.

As the Braves have struggled along this summer, several games off the National League pace, observers have said the absence of the Redhead's steadying influence is the difference between this year's pennant winners.

Haney hinted he may alternate the 36-year-old Schoendienst and Avila for a while.

"Even if Red's sitting on the bench, a guy with his effervescence has got to help the ball club," spoke Haney.

"Anyway," he added, "you don't think that's any real problem, do you, to have two guys like that around?"

Fullmer Says He Will Remain As Fighting Champ

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Power socking Gene Fullmer who brought action back to the middleweight title now promises to remain as fighting champ.

The 29-year-old Mormon Sunday school teacher from West Jordan, Utah, battered his way to the NBA world championship Friday night by stopping gritty Carmen Basilio in the 14th round in what may have been the New Yorker's last fight.

Fullmer and Basilio fought for the NBA version of the crown after the ruling body stripped the title from Sugar Ray Robinson for failure to defend since beating Basilio on March 25, 1958. Sugar remains champ in New York and Massachusetts.

Friday night the battler from Utah, who once before was champ for 118 days, reached full maturity as a boxer. He switched from his usual brawling, crowding style to follow a pre-arranged plan to the letter to soundly trounce former welterweight and middleweight champ Basilio.

"I think Basilio deserves a rematch," said Gene. His battered face looked only slightly better than Basilio's after the bloody, bruising scrap.

"Right now," said 32-year-old Carmen, "I'm too tired to say whether I want a return fight, might retire, or might go back to the welterweights."

One of his aides indicated there was a good chance of retirement after 11 years of pro fighting. Friday night saw Basilio stopped for the first time in his career.

The NBA meets next week to decide who it will name as the No. 1 challenger.

Dunce Captures American Derby

CHICAGO (AP) — Claiborne Farm's Dunce, brought through the pack on the rail in the stretch turn by jockey Lois C. Cook, Saturday won the $155,425 American Derby in Arlington Park by three and a quarter lengths over the 11-1 longshot Demobilize.

Dunce, 3-year-old bay son of Tom Fool, stepped the mile and a furlong on a track rated good in 1:49 3-5.

Priscilla D. Willis's Little Tytus was third, and W. Arnold Hanger's Waltz, and even money favorite of a crowd of 20,936, was fourth in a field of seven.

Dunce, a flop in the Kentucky Derby, Preakness, Belmont and Jersey Stakes this year, became the 10th horse to win both the rich Arlington Classic and American Derby in the same year.

His victory was worth $93,700 boosting his total earnings to $244,570.

The winner returned $8.60, $6.20 and $3.40. Kerr Stable's Demobilize, ridden by John Sellers, paid $8.80 and $3.80. Little Tytus, with jockey John Rotz seeking his fifth victory of the day, returned $2.60.

The appointment was announced by White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty. He said the nomination of Stebbins will go to the Senate this week.

United States Increases Lead Over Pan-Am Field

By TED SMITS
Associated Press Sports Editor

CHICAGO (AP) — The United States lengthened its lead over the field in the Pan-American Games Saturday by winning six more gold medals.

Five of Uncle Sam's triumphs came in track and field.

Josh Culbreath of Norristown, Pa., retained his Pan-American title with a time of :51.2 in the 400-meter hurdles for a games record.

Roy Norton of Oakland, Calif., breezed to an expected first in the 100-meters in :10.3 but was denied a record because of a favoring wind.

Isabelle Daniels of Jakin, Ga., took the women's 60-meters in :06.4 which tied the games mark.

Don Bragg of Penns Grove, N.J., boosted the Pan-American pole vault record up to 15 feet 2¼ inches in winning his specialty.

Irvin (Bo) Roberson of Philadelphia won the broad jump with a mighty leap of 26 feet 2 inches.

The sixth first for the United States came in the flyweight division of weightlifting where Isaac Berger, strong man from Hollywood, Calif., broke four Pan-Am records when he lifted a total of 782½ pounds. His efforts were 237 pounds in the press, 242½ in the snatch, and 303 in the jerk, all records.

The USA's Dave Edstrom, University of Oregon star from Sherwood, Ore., built a commanding lead in Saturday's five decathlon events.

Edstrom's total, after he tied for first in the 100-meter dash, in the shotput, and in the high jump, won a clearcut first in the broad jump and 400 meters, was 4:084. Trailing in second was Hector Thomas of Venezuela with 3,-471.

The second American in the competition, Phil Mulkey, of Memphis, had 3,371 for fourth place Canada's George Stulac was third with 3,423.

By the end of the daytime events, the United States had amassed nine gold medals, six silver medals for second place together with a tie for a seventh, and four third-place bronze medals. Argentina and Chile each had one gold medal. The West Indies Federation showed two seconds and three thirds in competition.

This is the strongest team the United States ever has sent into the games and nothing short of a miracle can stop a walkaway for honors.

Off the field of competition there was still dissension. A storm was calmed, however, when Argentina—which had threatened to withdraw from the games—agreed to remain when sufficient shells appeared for all the teams to practice. The rowing dates were set back to Sept. 4-6, near the tailend of the games, to give the Argentines sufficient time to practice.

The Chicago Daily News said in a story "a lack of thorough, detailed planning was blamed for the apparent breakdown in some places of Chicago's Pan-American hospitality.

"This, plus the conflict in the Latin and North American cultures and their different customs, appears to account for bruised feelings and short tempers that have broken into the open."

There even appeared to be a bit of confusion again in track and field after Friday's reversal of the hammer throw placings. Many in the press box thought Miss Daniels jumped the gun in the 60-meter dash and that the starter tried to call her back only to have his gun fail him.But the results were allowed to stand.

Norton's victory in the 100 meters before a crowd of 11,600 in Soldier Field, sweltering in near 90-degree heat for the 11th straight day, was as expected. But the battle in the 400-meter hurdles was a bitter one between Culbreath and Richard Howard of Los Angeles. Howard led most of the way and each hit the final hurdle but Culbreath had too much in the stretch.

Spray Captures Western Junior

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP)—Steve Spray, 18-year-old Indianola, Iowa, grocery clerk played steady one-under-par golf to win the Western Junior Championship Saturday 9 and 7 over David Leon, 19, of Tucson, Ariz.

Spray whose home town boasts only a 9-hole course, was an unheralded entry with no tournament experience.

In fact, he entered the tourney fully expecting to be eliminated in time to help with the weekend rush of business in his dad's grocery.

The young Iowan, who because of his age will be one of the few junior champs with a chance to defend his title, took command 6-up in the morning round. Leon, a student at the University of Arizona who had the edge in driving, had trouble putting.

Spray, who will be a freshman at the University of Iowa this fall, picked up two more holes' advantage on the out nine, then clinched the match with a birdie 4 on the 27th green when Leon holed out with a par 5.

Cardinals Pound Redlegs For 15 Hits, 7-3 Victory

ST. LOUIS (AP)—They laughed when St. Louis Cardinals' General Manager Bing Devine corralled so many first basemen, but four first sackers drove in all the Redbirds' runs Saturday night as they beat the Cincinnati Reds, 7-3.

Bill White drove in four runs with his twelfth homer and two singles. Stan Musial smashed his twelfth homer along with a double and single. George Crowe batted in a run with an infield hit and Joe Cunningham scored a run with a force-out. All normally are first basemen but Musial was at the initial sack Saturday.

The victory, the Cardinals' fourth straight, went to 20-year-old Bob Miller, a native St. Louisan. Another rookie righthander, Bob Duliba, held the Reds scoreless the last three innings. Bob Purkey suffered his fifth straight loss.

Cincy Manager Fred Hutchinson and second baseman Johnny Temple were ejected by Umpire Hal Dixon in the fifth inning following a rhubarb. The argument began on a third ball called on White before he homered.

U.S. CAGERS TRIUMPH

CHICAGO (AP) — Oscar Robertson led the continental United States team to an 89-57 victory over Puerto Rico Saturday night in the Pan-American basketball championships.

Robertson, 6 foot 5 inch All-American player from Cincinnati, scored 4 straight points in a drive that broke the game apart in the first period. He finished with 12 points.

WARD 1ST AT MILWAUKEE

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Rodger Ward, winner of the Indianapolis 500 miler, captured the 100-mile midget car race at the Wisconsin State Fair Saturday.

Ward led for 80 laps on the one-mile track. He averaged 97.264 miles per hour, finishing 10 seconds ahead of Jim Davies of Gardena, Calif.

McIntire 1st In Women's Amateur

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barbara Mc Intire, a Florida real estate saleswoman in her spare time, Saturday captured the U.S. Women's Amateur Golf Championship with a 4 and 3 victory over cute but outmaneuvered Joanne Goodwin.

Miss Mc Intire, 24, of Lake Park, Fla., chipped herself to a 4-70 lead with a birdie on the 26th of the scheduled 36-hole final at Congressional Country Club and halved her way to the title with pars the rest of the distance.

Miss Goodwin, 23, of Haverhill, Mass., had displayed the steadiest golf in the tourney until the showdown. She couldn't beat par on a single hole Saturday. For the closing seven holes she played as well or better than her lanky opponent, but it was too late.

Barbara birdied five holes and made them all count. She had to scramble to keep up on any number of holes but recovered expertly from dangerous situations.

The new champ was 3 over par through the decisive 33 holes. The loser was 7 over.

Aussies Need One Point To Regain Prized Davis Cup

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

FOREST HILLS, N. Y. (AP) — Wimbledon champions Neale Fraser and Roy Emerson smashed Alex Olmedo and Earl Buchholz in a storm-punctured doubles match Saturday and moved Australia within a single point of recapturing the Davis Cup.

The two Aussies, destructive with their services and deadly with volleys, didn't give the U.S. pair a chance in winning 7-5, 7-5, 6-4.

Olmedo, Peruvian hero of the successful 1958 Davis Cup campaign, again was a keen disappointment, dropping his service twice in the third set.

The match was interrupted by a howling, crackling thunderstorm with the Australians leading one set and the score 6-5 and 15-15 in the second. But after an hour and 20 minute wait, during which the West Side Tennis Club was drenched by heavy rains, the tarpaulin was removed and the contest renewed in a light drizzle.

The storm was so violent the television cameras were knocked out of commission—one of them struck by lightning—and the U.S. flag was blown from its staff.

The doubles victory, not unexpected, gives Australia 2-1 lead in the best-of-five series and throws over until Sunday the decision in this battle between the world powers of amateur tennis.

In the first match Sunday at 1:15 p.m. EST, Olmedo, whose lethargic play has been a puzzle, meets Rod Laver, the little lefthander he crushed in the Wimbledon final. Fraser takes on big Barry MacKay of Dayton, Ohio, who suddenly has emerged as the challenge round hero.

Most observers believe the series will hinge on the final match which sends together the two opening day victory. MacKay defeated Fraser in five sets in the Wimbledon quarter-finals.

Hopeful Stakes To Tompoion

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y. (AP)—Tompoion, a brown son of Tom Fool who has been knocking at the door in the big stakes recently, charged down the stretch Saturday and won the $114,475 Hopeful Stakes — richest race ever staged at this old cavalry post opened in 1864.

With Willie Shoemaker in the saddle, Tompoion finally won his first stakes with a late but brilliant drive. He overhauled the pace-setting Vital Force in the final sixteenth for a 1¼ length victory.

Bourbon Prince was third, another 2½ lengths behind Vital Force. It was another length back to Irish Lancer.

Nine 2-year-olds contested the 6½ furlongs race.

Tompoion, the favorite, paid $5.10, $3.60 and $3. Vital Force returned $14.20 and $9.60. Bourbon Prince was $5.60 to show.

QUINN INAUGURATED GOVERNOR OF HAWAII

HONOLULU (AP)—William F. Quinn was inaugurated governor of the new state of Hawaii Saturday. He urged the people to "be the sparkling beacon of free democracy in the Pacific."

"Our state government should and will draw its character from the crucible of mixed races which is our strength," Quinn told a cheering crowd.

The 40-year-old Republican governor spoke in a public ceremony at Iolani Palace, gaily bedecked with palms and flowers.

ADENAUER CALLS TALKS 'COMPLETE SUCCESS'

HAMBURG, Germany (AP) — Chancellor Konrad Adenauer said Saturday his Bonn meeting with President Eisenhower was a "complete success."

He told an interviewer of the Hamburg Sunday newspaper Welt am Sonntag that the "United States and Germany are on very good terms."

The Chancellor said he could not divulge any details of the "very personal and confidential talks" but would say that he considered them as "very important and a complete success.

Ike, Macmillan Discuss Cold War Problems

One idea being examined—and is still is only an idea—is to propose a cutoff of nuclear weapon production within a foolproof system of control and inspection.

This would be put forward as a first step toward a general disarmament program.

In the past the West has envisaged banning nuclear weapon output only as a final stage in a phased program of disarmament.

Already the United States, Britain and France have acted, informants said, to get new disarmament talks going with the Russians.

A three-power message to Moscow this week invited the Soviets to join in an early approach to the United Nations with the idea of getting negotiations started in Geneva early in 1960.

A 10-power conference—five Allied and five Red countries—would do the negotiating.

Referring to the secret talks, White House Press Secretary Haggerty said: "They were alone, and they did not tell anybody what they talked about."

However, Hagerty told a news conference later

1. Eisenhower and Macmillan examined "the problems caused by Soviet or Communist movements against the free world."

2. The President's forthcoming meetings with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev came into the talks. "The President repeated what he has been saying publicly since the announcement of the exchange of visits," Hagerty said.

3. The answer to a question as to whether they discussed Berlin, he said, was "indeed, yes."

4. The President has invited Mrs. Lakshmi Pandit, Indian high commissioner in London, to tea next Tuesday afternoon.

Correspondents have repeatedly asked whether the news from the Far East—where Prime Minister Nehru reported Indian troops have clashed with Red Chinese infantry on the border—had come into the talks between the U.S. and British leaders or those between their chief aides on foreign problems.

An official at India House in London said Mrs. Pandit had asked to see the President and he had "kindly agreed." Hagerty had said Eisenhower issued the invitation.

Mrs. Pandit's name had not previously been on the list of diplomats expected to see Eisenhower while he is in Britain.

A tight security network was drawn around their meeting place.

American Secret Service agents, Scotland Yard detectives, and special police guarded the house, inside and out. Police dogs were on leash at points around the grounds.

Chequers, 36 miles from London, is the official country residence of British prime ministers.

The President flew from Balmoral, Scotland, where he was the guest of Queen Elizabeth II, to the Royal Air Force base at Benson, England.

Harry Grayson's SCOREBOARD

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—There just can't be an Archie Moore. No prize fighter that fabulous ever lived.

Moore was shunned and shunted aside for the length of most boxers' careers. Five years ago a boxing commission physician declared him physically unfit to wage war. He has reached an age far beyond what usually is considered senility by ring standards.

Yet Moore is the most commanding figure in the business today. The awkward Yvon Durelle was, of course, the perfect foil for the supreme artistry of the venerable ring gypsy, but the circumstances of their first match enabled him to add to his stature by blasting out the fisherman.

It's a shame that Moore can't be preserved in some manner for pugilistic posterity. Ancient Archie should be around for eternity so ambitious fighters of future generations could see him and realize what it means to master the trade. Since that's not possible, even for this incredible bloke, let's not wear Archie out. He's the only good one left.

Moore may not be quite as old as the General Sherman redwood in Sequoia National Park, but he is every bit as durable and sturdy. His age is uncertain, but he is in the neighborhood of 43, and that's a large neighborhood where he is considered as some estimates have him within a few breaths of 50.

• • •

Taking Moore's own date, Dec. 13, 1916, would make him only two years and seven months younger than Joe Louis, who forsook the battlepit for the rocking chair eight years ago, when even the Brown Bomber admitted he was an old gent who had had it.

Moore is eight years older than Rocky Marciano, who retired undefeated after knocking out this same Archie five years ago and now is considered too old to come back for a joust with Ingemar Johansson. It's Old Archie who is now campaigning for the latter assignment, although he is almost five years older than Ezzard Charles, who should have given up long ago.

Archie undoubtedly is the most flamboyant fighter the ring has ever known—from the dazzling bathrobe to post-mortem speeches.

Moore is a one-man fight business—his own promoter, matchmaker, trainer and tub thumper. Archie conducted a Sears Roebuck-sized mail campaign to land the crack at Marciano.

• • •

When the heavyweight champion hung up his mitts, Archie pestered Jim Norris until the International Boxing Club put him in with young Floyd Patterson to determine Marciano's successor. His weird showing, or lack of one, against Patterson is the only one of his 206 fights which causes Moore to hang his otherwise proud head when the subject is brought up.

Moore never alibis, but he did point out that in his first bout with Durelle, in which he was on the deck four times, the temperature was around 40 degrees.

In the second edition, the thermometer hovered around 90, and Old Archie never was in the slightest bit of trouble.

• • •

Archie and his octogenarian adviser and second, Jack Kearns, make a fine pair. They are the most delightful charlatans in the sour science. Either alone is formidable when it comes to the intricate maneuvering of the fight game. Together they are unbeatable—old con men who've got the world on a string.

Moore and Kearns have set out to lure Johansson into giving Archie his third shot at the heavyweight championship. If they succeed, and don't bet they won't, here's a tip for Ingemar:

Fight Old Archie in Sweden in the middle of winter—outdoors.

Jerseyville will field a Frosh-Soph team again this year, and the schedule for the team is in the making.

RUN TO WIN

CINCINNATI (AP)—Pitcher Don Newcombe of the Cincinnati Reds thinks running is the key to pitching success.

"Running should come first and foremost with a pitcher," says Newcombe. "There's an old saying that goes: 'No run, no win.' You could add to this: 'No run, no win, no last nine innings.' "

Wrestling Champ Comes To College As Instructor

An addition to the Physical Education Department at MacMurray College was announced Tuesday with the appointment of Dwaine J. Marten. He becomes instructor of physical education.

A conference wrestling champion and football lineman while obtaining his Bachelor of Science degree at Bemidji State College (Minn.), Marten continued into graduate study at Southern Illinois University, Carbondale. He receives a Master of Science degree there this month. His field of study is Education.

DWAINE J. MARTEN

Marten, a 200-pounder and 5-7 in height, studied at the University of Minnesota in 1952-53 after receiving a diploma at Bertha high school. He was born in Clarissa, Minn.

While at SIU, Marten taught a physical education course as part of a graduate assistantship that he was granted.

He joins a MacMurray staff that is headed by Dr. Daniel W. Unruh, Director of Athletics, a former Bradley University athlete who came here with the first year of the men's college in 1957. Bill Wall, a former Ohio State University athlete, is basketball, baseball, golf, and soccer coach at MacMurray.

Dosh Sportsmen Plan Trapshoot For Labor Day

MEREDOSIA—Twenty six members and two guests attended the regular meeting of the Meredosia Sportsmen's Club Thursday night. President Joe Schneider conducted the business.

Plans were made to gather Sunday afternoon to cut the weeds on the clubhouse grounds and to put cinders on the parking area, using donated trucks and loader. This work is in preparation for the Club's twelfth annual Labor Day trapshoot—a Derby shoot.

The last games of the softball league, sponsored by the Club, were played Wednesday night, closing a very successful season.

The film shown was "Colombia—Crossroad of the Americas."

Refreshment committee for the September 10 meeting is Hugo Alhorn, Phil Morris and Harvey Brim.

William McCormick, Loren Wickert and Virgil Steinberg served chilled watermelon.

Softball Standings

The last games of the local softball league, sponsored by the Meredosia Sportsmen's Club, dissolved the three-way tie for second place which existed after games on August 18 and 19. On Tuesday, August 15, Berman's of Pittsfield won first place in the league by defeating the Bluffs Independents. Other games this week gave undisputed second place to Stoner's of Riggston when that team defeated Prairie Farms of Mt. Sterling; Stoner's received assists from the Mederosia Merchants' win over Sinclair of Beardstown and Kroger's win over the Moose.

The Sportsmen's Club presented the first place trophy to Bergman's on Tuesday night and the second place trophy to Stoner's on Wednesday night.

Final standings after the fourteen weeks season:

Diller Hanover Odds On Favorite To Win 34th Hambletonian

DU QUOIN, Ill. (AP) — Diller Hanover, sensation of the 3-year-old trotting ranks, is the odds-on favorite to capture harness racing's richest prize Wednesday in the 34th renewal of the Hambletonian.

An expected lineup of 19 trotters at the DuQuoin State Fair would provide a purse of more than $130,000, largest in the 150-year history of the sulky sport.

An early season choice, Diller Hanover strengthened his role as Hambletonian favorite by winning the Review Futurity of the Illinois State Fair Aug. 19 against 11 Hambletonian rivals.

The powerful bay colt of Hall Stables, Watertown, N. Y., took the race in straight heats of 2:01 3-5 and 2:01. Circo, another highly regarded Hambletonian eligible, was second in both heats.

Diller Hanover also won the final Hambletonian preview —the Sedalia, Mo., Matron Stake—after losing a first heat photo finish to Tie Silk, another strong Hambletonian contender.

Tie Silk, trained by the same Ralph Baldwin who trains Diller Hanover, set a race record in the first heat with a 2:00 2-5 with Baldwin at the reins. The Diller came back to win the second heat in a photo finish and the third heat by a half length.

For the third year the premier event for 3-year-old trotters is at the Du Quoin Fairgrounds where pari-mutuel betting is prohibited by state law.

The hard clay oval of Du Quoin is considered one of the fastest tracks in the country and could provide the setting for a new Hambletonian one-mile record.

Emily's Pride, a half sister of Diller Hanover, set the record with a 1:59 4-5 in winning the 1958 classic. Hoot Mon's 2:00 in Foshen, N. Y., in 1947 was the previous record. Both Emily's Pride and Diller Hanover were sired by Star's Pride.

Diller Hanover is trained and driven by veteran Ralph Baldwin, 43, who has been in the Hambletonian money several times but never has taken the 60 per cent winner's share of the purse. He thinks this may be the year.

"Diller Hanover can really trot when there is something for him to go after," Baldwin said.

At the Illinois State Fair in the Futurity, Circo set the pace in the first heat only to be overtaken by Diller Hanover in the stretch.

Circo's driver - trainer, Billy Haughton, switched strategy in the next heat and stayed back with Diller. When Diller made his move Haughton came on with Circo. The result was the same.

Another Haughton-trained colt, Hickory Pride, has considerable backing and is rated behind Diller Hanover and Circo in pre-race estimates with owners and trainers.

Haughton, 36-year-old national riding champion, also is seeking his first Hambletonian victory and will be driving Circo in a bid for this year's record haul.

The record purse for a harness race was $127,712.50 for the Empire Race in Yonkers, N. Y., Raceway July 30. The richest Hambletonian was the 1953 stake with a gross purse of $117,117.98. Helicopter, a filly, won that one.

Drawings for first heat post position at Du Quoin are scheduled Monday. Post positions for subsequent heats are determined by order of finish after the first heat.

If one horse wins the first two heats (each heat is a mile) he wins the Hambletonian.

If a horse loses one heat, but wins two out of three, he also wins. If three different horses each win a heat, these return for a fourth heat raceoff and the title.

Halas Seeks To Add Dallas And Houston To NFL

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—George Halas, chairman of the National Football League's expansion committee, Saturday recommended that Houston and Dallas be added to the professional football circuit in 1961.

Art Rooney, owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers, joined Halas, owner of the Chicago Bears, in the recommendation that will go before the league at its January meeting.

The NFL thus fired the opening gun in its possible lift-or-death fight with the proposed American Football League, backed by Lamar Hunt, Dallas oilman.

The announcement that the National League will try to take a pair of cities away from the American shattered what appeared to be a truce.

Hunt and other American franchise owners had reached agreement with Bell, commissioner of football, that there would be no player raids.

Other cities in the American League, which hoped to start playing in the fall of 1960 were New York, Minneapolis-St.Paul, Denver and Los Angeles.

Halas and Rooney said they have discussed their recommendations with 10 of the 12 clubs in the National League and they have met no opposition.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Joe Gordon, manager of the Cleveland Indians, rates infielder Woody Held among baseball's most versatile players.

"When I used Held at second base for a while last year, he was my best second baseman," says Gordon. "When I played him at third this spring he was my best there, too. Now he is doing a great job at shortstop. He plays ball like Gil McDougald of the Yankees."

Donovan Win Opens Up 3½ Game Lead

CLEVELAND (AP) — Chicago's Dick Donovan outpitched rookie Jim Perry in a tense duel Saturday, blanking Cleveland, 2-0, as the White Sox scored late to crush their American League pennant rivals for the second straight time and opened up a 3½ game lead.

Donovan (8-6), a right-hander, limited the Indians to five singles and struck out four while walking only three, one of them intentionally.

The White Sox broke the scoreless contest in the seventh inning with the aid of an error by Cleveland left fielder Minnie Minoso.

Jim Landis opened the inning by beating out a hit to shortstop. Perry retired the next two batters. Then Landis blazed around the bases as Earl Torgeson lined a single to left. Minoso fumbled the ball and Landis beat the relay.

In the eighth inning, Jim Rivera singled to right and moved to second on Donovan's sacrifice bunt. Luis Aparicio then beat out a grounder to deep short as Rivera scooted to third. He scored on Nellie Fox' fly to center field.

Perry (10-6) pitched a fine game himself. The White Sox tagged him for seven hits, all singles. He walked two and fanned four.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Gene Freese, Philadelphia Phillies third-baseman and team humorist, said after one of several early season pinch-hit home runs:

"I don't want to break Babe Ruth's record. I'd be satisfied to tie it. The way I have it figured out, I'll finish the season with about 164 RBI's and that's not bad for a benchwarmer."

After a bases-loaded pinch double in Milwaukee, Freese told roommate Wally Post: "I feel a little embarrassed, only getting a double."

Aaron Smashes Pair Of Homers As Braves Clobber Cubs, 11-4

CHICAGO (AP) — Milwaukee's Hank Aaron smashed his 35th and 36th home runs Saturday to offset a grand slam clout by Chicago's Ernie Banks, and the Braves defeated the Cubs 1-4 under a 16-hit barrage.

But it was Joe Adcock's 21st round-tripper that ended a 4-4 tie in the seventh inning before 20,277 spectators.

In the ninth, the Braves scored six more runs, the first on Aaron's second homer of the game. Other big blows were a two run triple by Del Crandall and a long one-run double by Eddie Mathews.

The Braves' victory tied them with Los Angeles for second place in the National League, 3 games behind San Francisco. The Dodgers and Giants were idle Saturday.

Lefty Warren Spahn won his 17th in 30 games. Milwaukee's victory gave them a 12-9 edge over the Cubs. The teams conclude their 1959 meeting here Sunday.

Bank's round-tripper gave him 38 for the season and tied him with Cleveland's Rocky Calovito and Washington's Harmon Killebrew for the major league home run leadership. The four RBIs boosted the shortstop total to 122, high for both leagues. It was Banks' second grand slam of the season and his seventh of his major league career.

Thompson Flashes To New Auto Speed Record

BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah (AP) — California Mickey Thompson flashed to a new American automobile speed record of 330.5125 miles per hour Saturday—coasting part way.

Thompson whizzed his four-engine Challenger I streamliner over the western Utah salt flats in two runs of 346.120 and 314.904 for the record average.

The Los Angeles printer broke his own record, set here last year, of 266.866. In Saturday's runs he became the first American driver to pilot an auto at an average speed above 300 miles per hour.

Thompson slowed down on his second run. He actually switched off his engines and coasted the last couple of miles over the marble-smooth salt flats. He knew he was already setting a record and did not want to risk damage to his streamliner.

Thompson hopes to average better than 400 mph for the measured mile next month. The late John Cobb of England set the international mark of 394.196 on the salt flats here 12 years ago.

Boston Defeats Baltimore, 4-1

Casale retired the first 13 men to face him before the Orioles tagged him for a run in the fifth inning.

Gus Triandos and Walt Dropo walked after one was out. Brooks Robinson flied to right on a 3-2 pitch before Chico Carrasquel blooped a bat-handle single down the left field line for the run.

The second Oriole safety was a smash by Triandos which third baseman Frank Malzone knocked down but couldn't handle in the seventh. In the ninth, Bob Nieman and Triandos got solid singles but were left stranded.

Mired in a slump, Jensen accounted for his 91st, 92nd and 93rd runs batted in with a pair of singles.

Ticket Sale Starts Tuesday For Pro Game Between Hawks, Nats

The Knights of Columbus, sponsors of the St. Louis Hawks-Syracuse Nationals game October 14 in the JHS Bowl, have announced tickets for the contest will go on sale Tuesday, September 1, at Mac's Clothes Shop.

All seats for the 8:00 p.m. attraction will be reserved at $2.50 per ticket. Mail orders will be accepted with self-addressed envelope. The contest features N.B.A. officials, 24-second clocks and 12 minute quarters.

The Hawks feature such stars as Bob Petit, Cliff Hagen, Charley Share, Slater Martin, Clyde Lovellette, Jack McMahon and they are coached by "Easy" Ed McCauley.

The Syracuse club has outstanding talent in George Yardley, Adolph Schayes, Red Kerr, Larry Costello, Bob Hopkins, Togo Palazzi and others.

Often passed over when the top centers in the league are concerned, and consistently shunned by the experts whenever all-league polls are conducted, John (Red) Kerr, star center of the Syracuse Nationals is none the less one of professional basketball's outstanding centers—a fact heartily agreed to by his foes in the NBA.

Starting his sixth season with the New Yorkers, the old redhead is just coming into his own as a post player and the upcoming season should be the best of his play-for-pay career.

One of the most durable players in the league, Kerr has a streak of 360 consecutive games going for him as this season approaches. Injuries nearly sidelined him midway through this past season but he managed to see action in every game.

Last year, he averaged 17.8 points a game scoring 1,285 points to finish 11th in the league. He was fourth in rebounding with 1,008 grabs off the boards, hitting a Syracuse team high of 27 rebounds in a game against Philadelphia.

His top-scoring output was a high of 34 in a playoff game against New York while his career high was set in Cincinnati two years ago when he scored 42 against the Royals.

A graduate of Illinois, where he set numerous school records that still stand including a career scoring mark of 1,299 for three seasons of play, Kerr is a great "two-way" player who is a threat offensively and a fine defensive stalwart.

He had his best offensive series against Cincinnati averaging 21.6 points a game for nine games and his low against Minneapolis hitting on a 14.7 clip for nine contests. He scored 148 points in nine games against the Hawks for a 16.4 average.

Last year, Kerr upped his free throw mark to a fine .766 and boosted his field goal percentage to .441, one of the best in the circuit.

Extremely fast, Kerr averages around 38 minutes a game, exceptional in these days of firebrand basketball. And he does a fine defensive job too.

He's the key to the Nationals' chances this year since outstanding centers in basketball are as hard to find as top pitchers in baseball.

Southeastern Conference May Produce Nation's Top Team For 3rd Straight Year

By MERCER BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — The Southeastern Conference produced the No. 1 college football team in the nation the past two years and there are at least three good reasons to believe the Dixie Dozen may make it three in a row.

One reason is Louisiana State, the defending national champion.

Another is Auburn, the 1957 top dog.

A third is Mississippi, a perennial power.

If all three of those solid contenders should falter, then the SEC championship battle will turn into a dog-eat-dog affair with almost every team in the running.

Florida, George Tech and Tennessee should be first rate challengers if some of their newcomers produce. Kentucky and Georgia look rugged on the ground and in the air. Alabama is rebuilding swiftly but probably is a year away. Vanderbilt, Mississippi State and Tulane generally are assigned to the rear ranks because of either too tough a schedule or too litle material.

Among the big three, LSU gets top pre-season billing. And not simply because the Sugar Bowl champs were unbeaten and untied and No. 1 in the final Associated Press poll last season.

Of the 35 lads who lettered under Coach Paul Dietzel's three-team system, 31 are rarin' to go again. They include All-America halfback Billy Cannon.

In addition to being a tremendous runner, Cannon is a talented passer, pass receiver, punter, blocker and defender. His backfield buddies include quarterback Warren Rabb and halfback Johnny Robinson, both members of the all-SEC team last season.

Dietzel again will use his famed three-unit system: A starting team of two-way players, a team of offensive specialists and the Chinese bandits, 11 youngsters dedicated to the fine art of defense.

Auburn for the past two years has been the No. 1 defensive team in the nation and owns the longest unbeaten string in college football—24 games marred only by a tie with Georgia Tech.

Until the 17th Century it was believed that Malaria fever resulted from "revolving planets, blazing comets and currents of starlight."

Wininger Grabs 3-Stroke Lead In Milwaukee Open

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Bo Wininger continued as hot as the weather and blistered the Tripoli Golf Club Course with a 6-under-par 64 Saturday for a 54 hole total of 195 and a three stroke lead in the $35,000 Milwaukee Open Tournament.

Wininger seeking his first victory since 1956 on the PGA tournament trail, carded eight birdies with brilliant putting to shake off determined challenges by Gene Littler and Ted Kroll, who also came in with 64s for a tie at 198.

PGA champion Bob Rosburg also toured the short 6,355-yard layout in 64 to advance to the final round of the fifth annual tournament with a 10-under par total of 200.

Wininger had trouble on only two holes during his brilliant round. He had to settle for bogie 5s on the 426-yard 4th and the 406-yard 17th.

Tied at 201 were Fred Hawkins and Tony Lema, who had third round 67s.

Two Illinoisans were among leading scorers: Marty Furgol of Lemont, with a 204, and Don Fairfield of Casey, 210.

FAN BREEZES

BY STAN SPOTTS
Journal Courier Sports Editor

Thursday morning I accomplished my annual trek to St. Louis to watch the Cardinals in action along with Russell Murphy, Ernie Smith and LeRoy Leach. And I was treated royally, not only by my traveling companions, but by Dean Stone, a relief hurler for the Redbirds. Ten years ago, Stone and I roomed together at Orlando and I had my doubts Thursday whether he would remember me. After all, we hadn't seen each other since the Florida tenure.

— o —

We arrived at the ball park around 11:45 and my companions decided they would chow down while I went to the players' ramp leading to the field. I knew Stone wouldn't pay any attention if I called him by his first name with all those autograph seekers around. So I called him by the nickname he had acquired in Florida and he knew who it was without any further adieu. He said, "We can't talk here, come through this door." Twenty steps later we were in the Cardinal dugout and with each step we had caught up on each other's activities during the past 10 years. Dean's uniform was dripping wet and I asked if he had just pitched batting practice. "Heavens no," he replied. "This Hemus runs the pants off his pitchers." Sounds like you're back at Orlando Buddy and Stone said. "The only difference here is, I'm not the only one that has to do sprints."

— o —

Solly Hemus approached us and I spoke. He replied and all the time I observed him, he never once cracked a smile or dealt out any friendly hello's. It was slightly warm sitting in the dugout and when I removed my cap to mop up some perspiration, Dean said you're in the same boat as me. He took off his cap and he was even balder. I asked about all our buddies and Stone put me up to date as to where they were and what they were doing. Dean told me we must have been a couple of crazy kids ten years ago when we played for a flat $150.00 a month. He said here we were making that kind of money, the wife was going to have a baby and we just barely had train money to get home after the season. Then when I got home that fall, I went to work for the railroad and every two weeks I had a paycheck amounting to $500. "Boy, I'll never ask my boy to go through that," Stone said.

— o —

I told him he had made the big time though, so, the hard struggle must of been worth it. "To get up here, Stan, you've got to know someone or have a pretty good contact." He said, "I was lucky, the late Clark Griffith (owner of the Senators) thought I was it and he brought me up to the parent club in 1953. When he died, I was sold to Boston. I had a real good year for the Minneapolis Millers last season and the Cardinals got me this spring. I don't know what my chances are with the Cardinals, but I'm going to stay in baseball just as long as I can. You know, the old arm and legs begin to slow down and your days are numbered." When asked what he was going to do when his career ended, he replied, "That's a good question. That is the biggest problem that confronts a ballplayer. Last year, a representative from Western Auto wanted me to quit the game and go to work for them but I don't care anything about those selling jobs. If I stay around long enough, I'll make a contact somewhere along the line."

— o —

Visiting players have to go through the Redbird dugout and the Big Guns of the Braves paused now and then to shoot the breeze for a short spell. Warren Spahn and Fred Haney were the friendliest. Hal Jeffcoat passed and yelled at Dean to buy him a dozen. He probably thought I was a salesman. Stone said Jeffcoat was the team's cut-up and the best liked person on the club. Hal gets all the horseplay started once the team leaves the field. In 1954, Dean hurled only one pitch and got credit for the All-Star victory. Leo Durocher was coaching third with Red Schoendienst on third. Schoendienst was to be squeezed in but the play backfired and the Redhead was out at the plate. Durocher claimed Stone balked. I asked Dean if he did balk and he said, "No. I couldn't have." He said, "We knew the play was coming and Ray Boone, the third baseman, warned me just as Schoendienst left. Durocher had to squawk about something because his strategy went astray."

— o —

I asked Dean several questions any fan would want to know. Some questions I asked: Do teams go over every hitter before every game in the clubhouse meeting? No, just the first game of each series. How do you pitch to Aaron? Mix the pitches up real good with plenty of changing speeds. Who are the really tough hitters in the league? All of them. The little guy that bothers me the most is pesky Johnny Temple of the Redlegs. Who will win the pennant? That is a tough one. The Giants could do it but Los Angeles has the sounder pitching staff. And don't count those Pirates out of it. They're getting in the groove. Is the pay good? A heck sight more than railroading. Is Musial finished? No, he'll be back next year and he'll train different in spring training. What are the Redbird chances next year? Good. It's a young club. When do players report before a game? Two and a half hours.

— o —

Dean, who celebrates his 30th birthday Monday, has his family with him in St. Louis during the summer. His boy is eight and the girl four years old. He resides near Moline in the off-season but this fall he'll be away from home for awhile as he is going to play winter ball in Havana. I asked Dean if he could get me a ball and a few autographs for Ernie Smith's boy. He said he could get the ball okay but the autographs might be difficult as the players want to get away from the park quickly after the game is over. The seventh inning saw rain halt the contest for 33 minutes. Dean had worked the sixth in relief without allowing any hits and was lifted for a pinch-hitter when the Cardinals rallied in the bottom of the sixth. During the delay, Smitty and I went to the dressing room and Stone was in the showers. The clubhouse attendant gave us the ball and told us Dean would see us after the game.

— o —

Ernie's boy did okay with his signatures. Signing were Musial Cunningham, Boyer, Mizell, Stone, White and several others. Rain came again in the bottom of the eighth with the Cards leading and we decided we had better head for home. Sometime in September I'll have to go back and thank Dean for his hospitality. The other highlight of the day! Murphy's maneuvering to get us out of St. Louis. The local boys are going to be on the lookout for a blue Cadillac bearing the license number 3000. It belongs to Stan Musial. They're going to pinch him for failing to hit with men on.

Yanks Rally To Down Senators

WASHINGTON (AP)—The New York Yankees came from behind twice to beat the Washington Senators 9-5 Saturday with Hank Bauer belting a pinch, two-run homer in the eighth and Mickey Mantle adding one in the ninth.

Harmon Killebrew hit a two-run homer off Yankee starter Bob Turley in the second inning. It was the Senator third baseman's 38th of the year and moved him back into a tie with Cleveland's Rocky Colavito for the American League lead.

The Senators led 3-0 after three innings, but the Yankees rallied for four in the fourth, chasing Washington starter Pete Ramos. The Senators came back with two in their fourth to lead, 5-4.

Against Washington relievers Dick Hyde and Chuck Stobbs, the Yankees pulled back in front, 6-5, in the fifth on three walks, an infield single and a fielder's choice.

County Zoning Talked At Jerseyville Meeting

JERSEYVILLE—At the invitation of the Jersey County Farm Bureau, the zoning committee of the Jersey County Board of Supervisors met in a point session Thursday evening with the agricultural group to hear explanations of county zoning, its purposes, advantages, disadvantages, its various forms of ordinances ranging from the very simple to a rather complex structure.

Al Cross, legislative representative for the Illinois Agriculture Association, was general spokesman for the evening, furnishing much information for the informal discussion which followed.

"County zoning," Cross stated, "is basically land use planning on a county scale and its purpose is to provide for the orderly growth of development in the county. In county zoning in Jersey county this would apply to the unincorporated areas.

Possible advantages of county zoning were listed as follows: planned development conservation of land values, protection of health and welfare and lessening of congestion on the highways. Possible disadvantages were enumerated as the idea of conforming to more regulation the starting of new subdivided areas may be slowed and the zoning ordinance costs money to be set up and to maintain and enforce it.

Seek Rehearing On Telephone Rate Increase

AD SEEK REHEARING

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — A rehearing on a $3,200,000 annual rate increase granted last month to General Telephone Co. of Illinois was petitioned for Saturday by both the company and opponents of the increase.

The Illinois Commerce Commission said both sides expressed dissatisfaction with the boost, allowed July 30 by the commission after a lengthy hearing.

The company serves some 900 communities in the state, 100 of which pooled their strength to battle the increase. Only Illinois Bell in the state serves more customers than General's 327,000.

The utility originally sought a $3,600,000 hike. Its rehearing petition claims the commission failed to consider the company's reproduction cost. Gerald Chapman, Chicago attorney, filed for the company.

The opposing communities, represented by Attorney J. Max Mitchell of West Frankfort, said the commission permitted excessive rates for the utility and overestimated its original property cost by about 200 thousand dollars.

An answer to the petition must be made by the commission in 20 days.

United Fund Advance Gifts Kick-Off Meet Planned Wednesday

Following the usual campaign strategy, Morgan County United Fund Advanced Gifts solicitors will precede the general solicitation. Advance Gifts start September 2nd and the general solicitation September 14th. The Advance Gifts goal is $43,500 as their share of the $80,000 Campaign Goal.

The Jacksonville and Rural Advance Gift sections will meet jointly at a luncheon Wednesday, September 2nd, 12 noon for their "Kick-off."

The "A List" Committee headed by Lawrence Oxley has already been at work. They are calling on last year's twenty largest donors. It is their hope to receive a minimum of a 15% increase from these contributors which will act as a challenge to the rest of the campaign organization and contributors. A 15% increase over the $70,50 received in last year's campaign will assure reaching the $80,000 necessary for the support of the 10 United Fund Agencies this year. Other members of the "A List" Committee are: Frank Rantz, Lee Sullivan Sr., W. O. Randall, Wilbur Rogers, Robert Capps, Jewell Mann, Arthur French, Chester Colton and A. Wadsworth Applebee.

The National Firms Committee has begun the business of laying the ground work for the solicitation of National Firms, Civic Clubs, and Labor Unions. Co-Chairmen are Sam Pack, Clarence Senn and Oscar Figgins. Committee men are Louis Sims, James Armitage, Don Fiedler, Lou Dean, Doye O'Keef, Brice Gustin and Dick Lukeman.

Rural Advance Gifts

The Rural Advance Gifts Committee is a new section of the campaign. They will follow the same procedure as has been carried out in Jacksonville, calling on over 100 prospects throughout the county. Co-Chairmen of this Committee are Leland Perbix and Ed Garlich. The Committee to date, with a few more to be added, is: Miller Obert, Roy Nickel, James Johnson, Maurice Walsh, Lloyd Anderson, Lawrence Mallicoat, Chester Thomason, Jack Kilver and Don Ransdall.

The Jacksonville Advance Gifts Co-Chairmen are Dr. Robert Hartman and Robert Fay. Working with them will be 50 men who will have some 350 prospects to call on. Co-Captains of the six teams are No. 1, Wayne Herrin, Robert Spink; No. 2, Albert Hall, Ed McCurdy; No. 3, Gilbert Todd, Richard Curtis; No. 4, Bill Buchanan, Dr. Robert Davis; No. 5, Walter R. Bellatti, Darrow Steinheimer; No. 6, Harris Rowe, Robert Sibert.

Osborne Elliott, Campaign General Chairman, voiced a great deal of optimism as he announced this Advance Gift organization. He said the response and ready spirit of men and women in taking their place in the Campaign organizations has been exceptional.

Another guest will be a representative of a livestock marketing agency who will discuss current livestock prices and trends. Also on hand to answer questions will be Ed Lamb of the Producers Livestock Comm. Co. at National Stockyards.

Mr. Hewitt says that many farmers made good profits from cattle feeding during the past three years, but there are a lot of questions about next year and Friday is a good time to air them.

He also points out that in recent months feeder cattle have been selling even higher than last year and farmers and ranchers now have a record-large herd. He says that the hog market has trended downward since July of last year but prices next fall will depend much on the size of next spring's hog crop and the farmers will decide that this fall.

Illinois Farmers Outlook Letter

FARM PRICES AND COSTS MORE THAN DOUBLE IN 20 YEARS

World War II began in Europe 20 years ago, come September. A comparison of present prices with those of August 1939, 20 years ago, will show the extent of inflation and the shrinkage in the value of the dollar over the 20-year period. Such information may be helpful in understanding present conditions and planning for the future.

Before listing these prices for 1939, we should recall that Congress had started the first price support program 10 years before, in 1929, and had passed additional major agricultural acts in 1933, 1936 and 1938.

Hogs. In August 1939 the average price received by farmers for hogs was $5.30 a hundred pounds. Prices went down that fall, and by June 1940 they averaged $4.78. The July 1959 average was $13.30, or 2.8 times as high as 20 years before.

Corn. Farmers got 46 cents a bushel for corn in August 1939. They got 47 cents for the whole 1938 crop, which they were selling when World War II opened in Europe. Our recent July average was $1.13, or 2.5 times the prewar price.

Wheat. The 1938 wheat crop sold for an average price of 56 cents a bushel. In August 1939, farmers were selling their new wheat for 55 cents. Last month, farmers received an average price of $1.70 a bushel, about three times the 1939 price.

Oats. Oats were going for 25 cents a bushel 20 years ago. Farmers had sold their previous crop for 23 cents. This year the average price for July was 61 cents a bushel, or 2.6 times the prewar price.

Soybeans. Soybenans were still a new crop when World War II began. In 1938 production totaled only 62 million bushels compared with 574 million in 1958. The average price received for the 1938 crop was 66 cents, and beans were going for 64 cents in August 1939. The average for July of this year was $2.05, or 3.1 times the 1939 price.

Beef cattle. Twenty years ago, just before World War II, the average price received by U.S. farmers for beef cattle was $6.74 a hundred pounds. That was for all classes and grades. The comparable price for last month was $23.10, which was 3.4 times the price received 20 years ago.

Calves. Veal calves went for $8.00 a hundred pounds in 1939 compared with $28.00 last month. The 1959 price was 3.5 times that of 1939.

Milk. Farmers got $1.69 a hundred pounds for milk in 1939. In July they got about $3.88, or 2.3 times the price of 20 years ago.

Altogether prices received by U.S. farmers were about 2.6 times as high in July of this year as they were 20 years ago.

Farm costs. Prices of commodities that farmers buy have increased almost as much as prices of the products they sell. Average prices of farm equipment and supplies are about 2.2 times as high as they were before the war. Average price of the things farm people buy for family use are about 2.4 times as high as prices of 20 years ago.

Milk supplies 15 percent of the protein in the American diet for only 11 percent of the food dollar, according to a University of Illinois nutrition specialist.

Winter oats mature earlier than spring oats and thereby escape the disease and dry, hot weather that spring oats often encounter.

Crowning Of 4-H Queen Friday Night Highlight

Crowning of the 4-H King and Queen highlighted Friday's activities at the Cass County Junior Fair as the last full day of judging and scheduled events came to a close.

Miss Virginia Aggertt, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Aggertt, Ashland, was chosen queen and Dale Strubbe, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Strubbe, Arenzville, was crowned king. Miss Aggertt is a member of Circleville Ag 4-H club and Mr. Strubbe is a member of the Union Ag; 4-H club.

Both members of the 4-H Royal family will reign over club activities in Cass county throughout the year, starting Sept. 1, the beginning of the 4-H fiscal year.

Trophies were presented to a host of entrants Friday evening before a capacity audience. The trophies were donated by various Cass county merchants and individuals for top awards in the many classes of livestock and home economics entries.

The judging of steers climaxed three days of keen competition among the junior exhibitors.

The Jurgens twins, Richard and Robert, Route 1, Ashland, made a clean sweep in the beef cattle division. Richard exhibited the grand champion and Robert the reserve champion. The boys dominated the show when the judge singled out the best of all breeds.

Judging of swine, home economics, agricultural products and poultry, and ponies were handled on Thursday. Friday was the day for dairy cattle, sheep and beef cattle.

Saturday's highlight was the sale of market livestock at 1:15 p.m. and the parade during the morning through the Virginia business district.

The Cass County Fair Association officers and directors are: Woods M. Crum, president; Maurice Plattner, vice president; Leland Sweatman, secretary; Elmer Jurgens, treasurer; Glenn A. Birnbaum, David Dodds, Russell Nordsiek, H. W. Strubbe, Alvin (Hank) Jones, Harold Hassman, Harlan Murphy, Charles Aggertt, Glenn Herzberger, Harry Winkelman, Lloyd Smith, Raymond Edge, Henry Carls, Pat Lathom, Floyd Miller.

Records show that cooler-than-average temperatures during July and early August help to produce high corn and soybean yields. Above-average rainfall during the first half of August increases corn yields, but slightly reduces soybean yields. From mid-August to mid - September, above - average rainfall increases soybean yields but decreases corn yields.

Hard red winter wheat prices in downstate Illinois may not rise enough to pay storage costs. But soft red winter wheat is likely to gain on hard wheat and make further storage profitable, reports a University of Illinois grain marketing specialist.

Mr. Eisenhower, Diplomat

President Eisenhower's 10 - day swing through key Western capitals looks to many like a great new departure in personal diplomacy for him.

By recent contrast, it is. Until stricken by his fatal illness, the late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles was the man who beat a path to every diplomat's door. The President was more than content to have Dulles perform these vital labors.

Yet Dulles' tireless travels across the globe in quest of peace should not have obscured the fact that Mr. Eisenhower's prepresidential reputation was founded in considerable part upon his display of diplomatic talent, both as wartime Allied commander and as chief of NATO.

This was the man who brought into workable accommodation the often sharply clashing viewpoints of the World War II Western powers, and who thereafter got NATO onto solid footing by welding together the first multi-nation defense force established in time of peace.

Time will tell whether the President's talents in this realm are as sharp as they once were. They will be strongly tested in Europe as he seeks the ever-elusive goal of reasonable unity among friendly but bickering allies.

Our Western friends already have given their approval to the forthcoming Khrushchev visit to the United States. Nevertheless, it is important for Mr. Eisenhower to be able to present to him policies and attitudes which have the full support of these nations. This he now tries for with all the personal skill at his command.

What the President is doing is truly a new departure only in the sense that it is the first time the full weight of his powerful office has been given over to personal diplomacy of this sort.

His decision to undertake it now is believed to reflect more than the tragic loss of Dulles. It suggests his conviction that, other approaches having failed, his own face-to-face efforts with both friends and adversaries might be the last real hope of peace.

If, somehow or other, he is encouraged to extend this personal diplomacy beyond the current series, including the exchange with Khrushchev, then it may well be that he will be staking his entire reputation as a peacemaker on this renewal of his old talents in the closing years of his regime.

Built-In Obsolescence

The other day, while defending his government's action in deposing the Communist regime in the Indian state of Kerala, India's Prime Minister Nehru told his parliament that communism is out of date.

And he called the application of it in some countries "utterly wrong," though he did not specify which nations he had in mind.

Nehru placed communism among the "crusading religions" which start out with full intent to conquer the whole world but never succeed.

No single system ever has achieved that goal, he said. What happens as its advocates try to spread it, he added, is that it is toned down and adapted to differing conditions. But by that very process it loses its single identity.

There's good sense in this. Communism certainly is not the same as seen in Poland, Yugoslavia, Hungary and Red China. Even in Russia, the great fatherland, it is sharply modified from the original post-revolutionary practice of the early 1920s.

For all its doctrinaire blather, it has borrowed heavily from capitalism and free enterprise. As Communist lands are exposed more and more to the methods and achievements of the free system, the prospect is for still more borrowing.

The violent totalitarian authority of communism unquestionably played a big part in lifting Russia from the peasant backwardness it knew in 1918 to the industrial gianthood of today.

But for some years now there have been pronounced signs that these tactics cannot be counted upon to carry Russia much farther up the scale. Needed now are incentives, and the free play of individual resourcefulness and energy.

Moreover, there is powerful evidence that communism in its purer forms is almost totally unworkable in so crude an economic society as that of agrarian Red China. Very likely Nehru was thinking of the Chinese when he said communism was "utterly wrong" in some places.

Communism is indeed out of date, as is all tyranny in any age where freedom flourishes even a little. Communism never was really "in date" on this earth, for it has nothing to offer the masses of human individuals that they could not better attain through the organized effort of free wills.

In Hollywood

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The great Durante was back in action this week, and the word is chosen advisedly.

Jimmy was hustling all over NBC's Studio 2—blowing bubbles at Lawrence Welk, making up a beatnik trio with Sal Mineo and Giselle McKenzie, dueting with Bobby Darin and dancing a la Fred Astaire. All this activity will be seen Sept. 25 in a Friday night TV spectacular.

Durante paused for a few minutes to give his nose a rest and talk about his activities. The hour show is one of three he'll do this season, plus two guest appearances with Dinah Shore, the latter as part of his long run NBC contract.

"I like it better dis way," he remarked. "Doin' just a few shows a year, I can give more attention to 'em. I'd never go back to dat live show every week.

"But I would like to do some shows on fillum. I got 24 of 'em and I'd like to make about 15 more. Then I'd have enough for a season and they'd give me some security."

Not that he shows any signs of slowing down. He still plays night clubs in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Miami and Las Vegas every year.

"But dat ain't woik," he said. "Dat's how I get my fun. I go out dere and enjoy myself for an hour, dat's all. The only hard woik I do is a little dancin'."

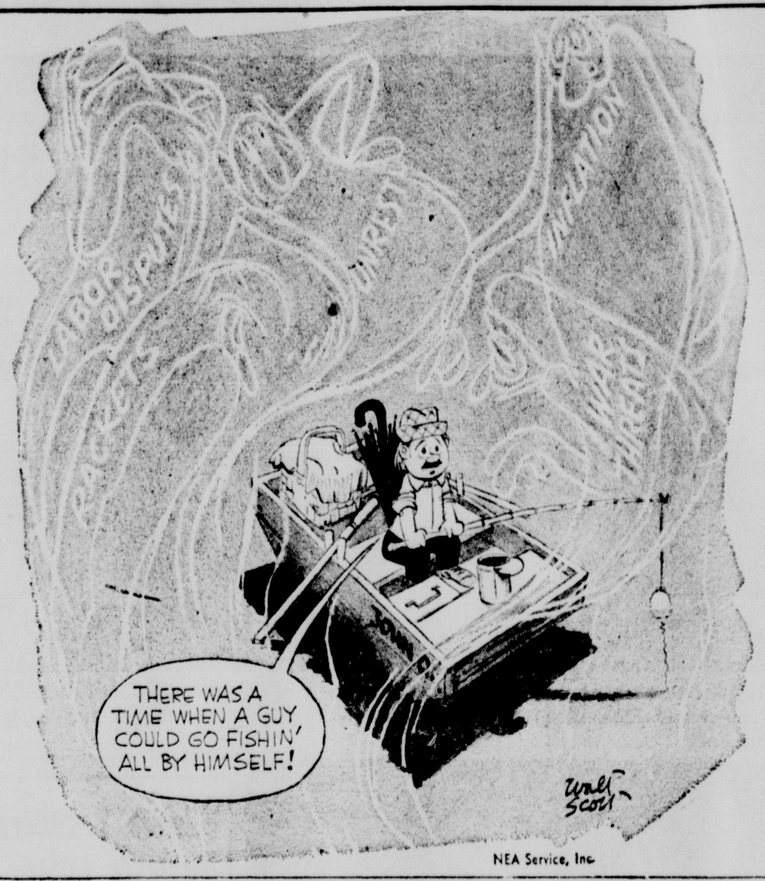

This may help to explain the Durante success: when he's working, it seems like fun.

Jimmy said a deal is still cooking for a movie about his life. The dream cast was originally Dean Martin as Durante, Frank Sinatra as Lou Clayton and Bing Crosby as Eddie Jackson. Now Bing appears to be out of the project, with Jack Lemmon in his place.

Beauty Finds Out What's in Her Name; How One Senator 'Rose' to the Occasion

BY JERRY BENNETT
NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Prettiest girl to hit Washington in months is Miss Korea, otherwise known as Hyun Choo Oh. The 19-year-old beauty recently represented her country in the Miss Universe Contest.

She told reporters at the Korean Embassy's Independence Day reception that ever since her arrival in the U.S., people have been making jokes about her name. Hyun Choo says that men have been referring to her as "Oh, Look at That," "Oh, Brother," and "Oh Me, Oh My."

WHEN ASKED WHAT he planned to do with profits from his best-selling novel, "Advise and Consent," reporter Allen Drury cracked:

"I'm going to divide the money into two piles. The big pile will be for the tax collectors. The little one will finance the Drury Foundation. It will be set up to buy candy bars for small children."

BEST RECEPTION so far this summer was the small, informal affair tossed by Pakistan Press Attache Sayed Haq. Although it was scheduled to end at 8 p.m., the last guests didn't leave until after 10.

Principal reasons for delayed departures were Haq's talents as a host, the air conditioning system and the food. Most popular hors d'oeuveres were tiny mint flavored meat balls that Haq prepared himself. Another favorite was namakpara. Guests dubbed this food Pakistani potato chips. Haq's sister, Khadija, prepared them by simply frying thin slices of salted flour dough in deep fat.

IN OCTOBER, the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Assn. will sponsor an election to select a national flower. To promote the event, a photographer posed New York Senators Jacob K. Javits and Kenneth B. Keating in front of a ballot box as if they were casting their votes.

Just as the photog was about to snap the picture, Javits yelled, "Wait. I can't be photographed without a rose." That's the flower being plugged by the New York solons.

The photographer explained that it wasn't worth the trouble finding a rose since it couldn't be identified in a black and white photograph.

"Doesn't matter," Javits insisted. "I'm not going to have my picture taken unless I have a rose." With that he turned to a startled page boy and ordered, "Find me a rose."

SEN. BOB KERR (D-Okla.) makes the following crack about the marriage of New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's son to the daughter of a Norwegian grocer:

"Rockefeller said he welcomed the marriage. But the timing probably pleased him even more. It was the only way that his name could compete with the Nixon tour for front page headlines."

AS A PROMOTION stunt for its annual Christmas-in-August celebration, Washington's Gaslight Club covered the front steps with a load of ice and snow from a local skating arena. A fresh load was dumped in front of the club each day for a week.

The stunt went off without a hitch until a black mongrel dog decided to cool off on a chunk of ice in front of the door. The low growl he gave anyone approaching the entrance caused several members to take their after-work snorts at a hotel cocktail lounge around the corner.

SEN. HUGH SCOTT (R-Pa.) has joined the horde of critics of the new Senate office building. The newly completed structure has probably received more verbal lambasting from congressmen, architects and reporters than any other building in Washington.

Scott describes it as resembling a "white elephant." He declares: "Whatever may have gone wrong in the new building can be attributed to mechanical and construction failures, to the frustrations of engineers and committee members attempting to adjust to the machine age or perhaps, simply to the inate perversity of inanimate objects."

WASHINGTON IS probably the only city where politics can be as important as talent to the success of an out-of-town entertainer. First night lovely songstress Louise O'Brien opened at the Casino Royal, she mentioned that her father used to be in Congress. Her dad is former Rep. Ed O'Brien (D-Okla.)

"The whole audience applauded," Louise says. "And I hadn't even sung one note."

What to Do About Neighbor With Raggle-Taggle Lawn

A homemaker wants to know: "What can I do to get our next door neighbors to keep their lawn mowed?

"This one neglected yard detracts from every house in sight. And it's worse for us because we live right next door and have to look at it. Can't we do anything?"

Nothing that I know of.

If you mention it to your neighbor you'll make an enemy—and having an enemy next door could be a lot more unpleasant than unkept grass.

If you belong to a garden club you might ask your next door neighbor if she would like to join. If you can get her to just a few meetings she might get interested in her yard.

If that doesn't seem practical, then why not plant a hedge of high-growing shrubs to cut off the unsightly view?

That in itself ought to be a gentle hint that you are tired of looking at tall grass and weeds.

In the meantime don't fret too much.

Families who buy homes and then don't bother to keep them up, are very often "movers" who go from one neighborhood to another.

So you may be rid of your problem sooner than you think.

Yours isn't an uncommon plight. Furthermore, it really isn't the most serious problem a neighborhood can have.

matter of FACT

Because the earth's orbit around the sun is not circular, the earth's distance from the sun changes at different times of the year. When the earth is closest to the sun, in January, the distance is about 91,500,000 miles. This is called the perihelion, from the Greek for "near the sun." When the earth is farthest away, in July, the distance is about 94,500,000 miles. This is known as the aphelion from the Greek for "away from the sun."

The World Today

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — Premier Nikita Khrushchev took his time getting tough. Some men swear by nuts, berries or good, red meat for feeling fit. But Khrushchev acts like a man who got his muscles from missile milk.

You could see him grow, and his disposition change, if you went back day by day over his life since 1953 and read what he has said about the West. Stalin died that year and Khrushchev, comparatively unknown, became boss of the Communist party in the U.S.S.R.

Khrushchev then still was considered only the No. 2 man, under Premier Georgi Malenkov, who succeeded Stalin. All through 1953 Khrushchev had practically nothing to say. By then, of course, the Soviet Union had come a long way.

It had the atom bomb. But it wasn't until the end of the year that the U.S.S.R. developed the hydrogen bomb. The United States already had both. But the Soviet Union was working on missiles, too. That was going to change things.

Khrushchev didn't do any boasting in 1953. He didn't do any in 1954, either. He just held his lip. When he did talk, it was friendly. He said communism and capitalism must cooperate. This was the beginning of his coexistence theme.

Khrushchev didn't really begin to talk until 1955, when Malenkov got the gate and Nikolai Bulganin became premier. Khrushchev was still only party secretary but more and more he began to sound like the No. 1 man.

Khrushchev even sounded humble in mid-1955. Just before going to the Geneva summit conference with Bulganin he said no one should get the idea the Soviet Union was going there on broken legs. There was nothing boastful about that.

By early 1956, Soviet scientists must have been making impressive progress with missiles. For on April 26 that year Khrushchev began boasting: he predicted the Soviets would have a guided missile with an H-bomb warhead.

Still, he was willing to acknowledge the United States was the No. 1 power. He said on June 7, 1956, it was a "pat on the back" for the Soviet Union to be compared with this country as one of the two great Powers. This humble mood didn't last long.

In November that year, Khrushchev was boiling. Britain, France and Israel had invaded Egypt and there had been a revolt in satellite Hungary.

He told Western envoys in Moscow: "Whether you like it or not, history is on our side. We will bury you."

The new Khrushchev, the one the world has been hearing ever since, emerged. Irked by President Eisenhower's doctrine of giving military help to Mid - East countries which asked for it, Khrushchev said: That doctrine would land on the "garbage heap" of history.

In May 1957, he was talking of having an H-bomb that could melt the arctic ice cap. That same month he told the Western world its children would live under socialism.

By August he was predicting a higher living standard for Soviets than Americans have. Then the reason behind this surging confidence became clear: in October and November the U.S.S.R. beat the United States into outer space with its Sputniks.

The Soviet Union was ahead in the missile race. Khrushchev taunted this country by challenging it to a "peaceful rocket contest." By December he was warning American allies not to let the United States set up missile bases on their land.

By this time no one had any doubts about who was No. 1 man. It was made official March 27, 1958, when Khrushchev pushed Bulganin aside and became premier. He was modest, starting out, and peaceful.

He said "we shall conquer capitalism with a high level of work and a higher living standard." By April 1958, he was predicting Americans were destined for second place in the world economic leadership. Then he stopped being mild.

In August 1958, angered by American and British help to Lebanon and Jordan in the Middle East, Khrushchev said the U.S.S.R. would destroy both big powers if they let a new war loose.

Then he got tougher than ever. On Nov. 10, 1958, he told the United States, Britain and France to get their occupation troops out of West Berlin. He followed this threat: if they tried to force their way into Berlin they would regret it.

This started the Berlin crisis which brought about the upcoming mid-September meeting between Eisenhower and Khrushchev. It was actually Khrushchev who proposed the exchange visits. He did this July 7, 1959.

When Eisenhower, on Aug. 3, announced he and the Soviet Premier would exchange visits, it was really an acceptance of Khrushchev's idea.

Sisters Plan Fun, Learning In One-Room Schoolhouse

BY MARIE DAERR

Misses Evelyn and Mabel DeWitt of Lakewood, Ohio, have a pretty good hunch that, when they retire, they will spend a good bit of their time in a one-room schoolhouse which their mother once attended, and where she taught in 1898.

Two years ago, they and their mother, 80-year-old Mrs. Grace Trowbridge DeWitt, bought the white frame building that once housed old South School, an historic old landmark at Fowler Center, near Youngstown, Ohio. This is some 70 miles from the DeWitts' present home.

Then the three women launched the McGulley Museum and DeWitt Crafts Shop, a project that started with moving the 24x26-foot building a half mile to the 100-acre Trowbridge family farm. It included renovating the building, some of this a do-it-yourself job, and installing it in the McGuffey Reader collection that is one of Mrs. DeWitt's treasures, and also a gift shop.

"We hope to make this a learning-and-fun center for people from the surrounding countryside," Mrs. DeWitt said. "We want to have classes in such subjects as genealogy, needlework, ceramics, shellcraft and textile painting.

The DeWitts will recruit instructors for some of their classes. Mrs. DeWitt herself has gained a reputation for dramatic recitations, so she will put this talent to use and again turn teacher.

Another old South School pupil, 80-year-old Samuel Scovil, offered the DeWitts an 1846 map of the countryside and an old pump organ for their museum-recreation center. Miss Mabel is an accomplished organist, so she plans to play for the entertainment of visitors.

Other exhibits that will interest people of all ages are a dress which Mrs. DeWitt's mother wore when she attended old South School during Civil War days, a songbook of the 1870's, and an old bell, dictionary and a chart of the solar system that were put of the school's equipment.

The DeWitts were delighted with the excellent condition of the old building's white oak framework. They replaced the yellow poplar siding with Philippine mahogany. They added knotty pine paneling and an ironstone fireplace.

Miss Evelyn is librarian for a law firm. Her sister is a secretary at an insurance agency.

"We're spending every weekend at the project now," Miss Evelyn said. "If it is successful, Mabel and I won't need to look for a post-retirement hobby."

WEEKLY BIBLE COMMENT

A Remarkable Religious Experience

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, M.D.

Recently I commented on the religious novels and movies of the late Dr. Lloyd Douglas, author of "The Robe," "The Magnificent Obsession," and other books.

When I was editing "The Congregationalist" on Beacon Hill in Boston, and Douglas was a minister in the middle west, he came to the "Hub" as a visitor. We went on a boat ride to Nantucket. The day and the outing were perfect and our chief interest was in intimate conversation.

The outcome was that Douglas told me much of his life story. I want to recall some of it though it is not precisely in the area of "Bible comment."

During the years of our friendship, I had known Douglas as a Congregational minister of independent and liberal opinions and attitude. I knew, however, that he had been a Lutheran minister, with undoubtedly a more orthodox and conservative attitude toward the church and religion. I wondered how he had come to be a Lutheran, and how being a Lutheran, he had renounced a prominent Lutheran pastorate to become a Congregationalist.

As Lloyd told me the story, his father, a Presbyterian, and a fellow student, a Lutheran, were deeply attached to one another. When the time came to go to college they tossed a coin, or drew lots, or in some other way, decided whether they would go to a Presbyterian or to a Lutheran college. The Lutheran won. Douglas' father finished his course at the Lutheran college and offered himself for the Lutheran ministry. He was considered unorthodox and was turned down.

In a violent reaction he quit all thought of the church and the ministry, and turned to the study of law. He was associated with Marshall, later vice president of the United States.

Despite their difference in social status, Douglas was intimately friendly with a porter who took care of the law offices. Once, they went to a revival meeting together.

As Lloyd told me the story, the evangelist never turned up at the meeting. The porter substituted and preached the sermon, directed to one man, the lawyer. Under its influence Douglas had an intense, old-fashioned conversion during which he vowed that he was going into the ministry, as he had originally intended. He dedicated his newborn son, Lloyd, to fill the 25 years that he had lost.

As good as he vowed, he quit his law practice with its income of several thousand a year, and went circuit riding in the near south, with a yearly salary of $400. It was thus that Lloyd grew up, riding the buckboard with his father. They would often play word games.

It was thus that Lloyd got his facility in the use of words. His father, he told me, emphasized everything in his studies that would help him in the ministry and that he took the 25 years to which his father had dedicated to him seriously.

Here's a Recipe That Makes Use of Leftover Turkey

BY GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Food and Markets Editor

Here's a recipe to answer that big question—how can I use all this leftover turkey? The wilted cucumber recipe makes good salad sense, too.

Sweet and Pungent Turkey
(Makes 6 servings)

Two tablespoons salad oil, ¼ cup chopped onion, 1 can (6 ounces) sliced broiled mushrooms, 1 can (1 pound, 4 ounces) sliced pineapple, 1 jar (8 ounces) large sweet gherkins, 2 teaspoons salt, 1 teaspoon ground ginger, 4 cups diced, cooked turkey, 2 green peppers, 3 tablespoons cornstarch, ¼ cup water, 4 cups hot cooked rice, 1 can (3½ ounces) flaked coconut.

Heat oil over moderate heat (in electric skillet with temperature control set at 350 degrees F.) Add onions and cook 5 minutes. Drain mushroom juice, pineapple juice and pickle juice into a pint measuring cup and add enough water to make 1 pint. Pour liquid into skillet and stir in salt and ginger. Add turkey, mushrooms, pineapple cut in thirds, and pickles cut diagonally in thirds. Cook covered until thoroughly hot—about 5 minutes. Add green pepper cut in eighths lengthwise. Blend together cornstarch and water and add gradually, stirring until thickened. Serve with hot cooked rice and garnish with flaked coconut.

Wilted Cucumbers
(Makes 6 to 8 servings)

Two-thirds cup salad oil, one-third cup vinegar, 2 teaspoons marjoram or basil, 1½ teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoons pepper, 2 cucumbers, thinly sliced, 3 medium onions, thinly sliced.

Mix oil, vinegar and seasonings; add cucumbers and onions. Marinate several hours or overnight.

Monday's Dinner: Sweet and pungent (leftover) turkey, steamed rice, flaked coconut, seeded rolls, butter or margarine, watercress salad, fresh fruit cup, cookies, coffee, tea, milk.

Jersey County Farm Bureau Moves Into Fine New Building

By ARTHUR THATCHER

JERSEYVILLE — The Jersey County Farm Bureau and subsidiary groups, completed moving operations Wednesday to the new building at the corner of East Carpenter and South Jefferson streets. Open house will be held there some time the latter part of September.

For more than quarter of a century the Farm Bureau offices have been located on the first floor of the Masonic building on West Pearl street. The past few years the basement of the building has been utilized for farm meetings and other group sessions and a well-equipped kitchen in that area made serving of meals convenient.

The new building is air-conditioned and is of glazed tile, concrete and steel construction. The reception room is in the center of the building on the north side.

Private offices for the Farm Adviser, Assistant Farm Adviser and Home Adviser occupy the south side of the building and on the north are the offices of the IAA Insurance Service, IAA Adjusters, secretaries and treasurers of the Production Credit Association and National Farm Loan Association and Illinois Breeders' Association technician. A small room for meetings of the Board of Directors and other groups is located in the northwest section of the building. The Jersey County Produce Association occupies a room in the southwest corner and the soil testing laboratory is in the west end of the building. Other rooms are men's and women's lounges and storage space.

Desks of the Extension Service, Farm Bureau Secretary and Home Bureau Secretary are located in the entrance hall adjacent to th respective offices.

The basement houses a 20 x 20 foot kitchen, 48 x 50 foot meeting room, furnace and equipment room and men's and women's rest rooms. Cabinets have been installed and two new stoves and a refrigerator have been purchased. The basement meeting room has a seating capacity of around 300 and approximately 170 can be seated at tables.

The J. C. Wohnlich Construction Company of Alton was the general contractor for the building. Modern Electric Company and Harvey Collins Refrigeration Service, both of Jerseyville were contractors for the electrical work, heating and air conditioning. O. H. St. Peters was superintendent of construction and much of the work was done by volunteer help.

The Jersey County Farm Supply Co. and Jersey County Grain the rock for the parking lot which Company furnished and hauled will accommodate about 50 cars.

Average prices of farm equipment and supplies are about 2.2 times as high as they were before World War II. Average prices of things farmers buy for family use are about 2.4 times as high as prices of 20 years ago.

New Fly Pestering Cattle In Illinois

URBANA—A new fly, called the "face fly," is pestering both dairy and beef cattle for the first time in Illinois this summer.

Face flies are persistent and greatly annoy cattle, even though they do not suck blood, observes Steve Moore, extension entomologist with the University of Illinois College of Agriculture and Illinois Natural History Survey.

Animals infested with face flies bunch up, twitch their ears and shake and rub their heads. Often the animals' eyes will water excessively. It is suspected that these flies may spread pinkeye. In addition, they cause a reduction in milk and butterfat production.

First Reported in 1952

Moore says that the face fly was first reported on the North American continent in Nova Scotia, Canada, in 1952. It came originally from Europe or Asia. Although the flies haven't been positively identified in southern Illinois, they are present in the northern two-thirds of the state.

So far, little is known about how to control these flies. But Moore believes that any attempt at controlling them should include both on-animal and off-animal treatment.

Off-animal treatment: Spray around barns, sheds, board fences, shade trees and other places where flies alight. Apply to the point of run-off, using 1.0 per cent diazinon, 2.0 per cent DDT or 1.0 per cent toxaphene spray.

Beef cattle treatment: Apply either 1.0 per cent DDT or 0.5 per cent toxaphene spray, using 1 to 2 quarts per animal. Be sure to get complete coverage of the head. Do not market animals treated with DDT within four months after treatment; for toxaphene, wait 28 days before marketing.

Dairy cattle treatment: For dry stock that will not freshen for four months, follow suggestions given for beef cattle. For milking cattle, apply 6 to 8 ounces of a 2.0 per cent Tabatrex repellent spray to the head. Repeat treatments every few days.

A 0.5 per cent Tabatrex ready-to-use oil solution is also available. Apply it at the rate of 1 or 2 ounces per animal. If other biting flies are a problem, treat the entire animal. Another repellent material, R-326, should give similar protection.

As a general rule, standard stock sprays have not proved effective against face flies.

Moore emphasizes that these treatments are only suggestions.

For more information about these flies, contact your county farm adviser.

This Week.. at Dixon Springs

War On Ragweed

On the Station, stubble pastures, or new pastures following removal of small grain, have a wonderful stand of clover and lespedeza—and a vigorous growth of ragweed. Now this weed is not particularly beautiful; livestock gains from ragweed have never been outstanding; and it does take tons of water from the soil. Because ragweed has nothing to recommend it, the Station mowers have declared war on it. Clipping the pastures before the weed pollinates will reduce the seed crop, improve the looks of the pasture, save soil moisture and make livestock grazing more comfortable. Mowers are set to clip six to eight inches high, low enough to knock down most of the ragweed and yet high enough to top most of the clover and lespedeza growth.

Drainage Improvement

There are several hundred acres of creek bottoms located on three different creeks—Boy, Sugar and Hays—on Station lands. These bottomland areas are subject to flash flooding but, worse than that, they have many low spots and potholes that never drain well. The flash floods we can't control, but we can improve the general drainage of the fields. Each summer Lee Gard, Station soil and water researcher, and his crew of drainers go to work on a new field. Right now the crew is working on the Elam bottom. Drainage involves clearing some trees and brush, cutting open ditches into creek and leveling and filling the low spots.

Each field is a separate problem, differing from the others, so casts will vary. However, machinery and labor records showed that it cast about $40 an acre to drain and level the Robbs bottom last summer. In return for this expenditure, we expect a greater choice in cropping, including winter cereal grains, clover and grass pastures, as well as summer row crops. Yields and livestock should be higher, and we expect to get into the fields much earlier.

Bulls Out

George Cmarik, cattle researcher, and Oakley Robinson, cattle herdsman, have hauled the bulls out of the pastures. Any cows that have not been bred by now are out of luck and will probably end up on the butcher's block. Both George and Oakley know that, to be worth her keep, a beef cow must breed regularly. They also know that they can ill afford to worry with new calves all during the year. The cow herds have had their opportunity in three heat periods. That should be enough.

Quarter Horses

New to the Station, and presently switching their taste from bluegrass to fescue, are six quarter-horse mares and four colts. These cattle-working horses were recently transferred from the Champaign-Urbana campus to the Dixon Springs Experiment Station.

4-H Enrollment Reaches All-Time High In Illinois

URBANA — Illinois 4-H Club membership reached a record high of 71,435 this year. This total is more than 3,000 above the previous record set in 1958, according to George Daigh of the state 4-H staff at the University of Illinois.

Daigh credits part of the increase to new 4-H projects, such as photography, automotive maintenance and bird study, which have encouraged more small-town and city boys and girls to enroll in 4-H work.

Another reason for the record enrollment is a concentrated effort by local and state 4-H leaders to keep youngsters in the 4-H program longer. U. S. Department of Agriculture estimates point out that, although about 65 percent of all rural young people are members of 4-H Clubs at some time in their lives, less than 20 percent are active in 4-H work at any one time.

The Illinois program is increasing the re-enrollment of members by making 4-H activities more attractive to young people up to 20 years of age.

Total U. S. 4-H enrollment is also increasing. In 1958, 4-H enrollment throughout the nation reached 2,253,999. This is a gain of 2.4 percent over 1957.

Accidental discovery of a new form of nitrogen in the soil has led to a special $19,250 research grant for University of Illinois soil scientist Frank J. Stevenson. The National Science Foundation awarded the two-year grant for basic research in the nitrogen composition of various rock formations.

NIGHT BLOOMING CEREUS

Mrs. George Drennan is pictured showing her thriving night blooming Cereus to an awed photographer around midnight of Aug. 22 in the back yard of the Drennan home, 1048 Grove street.

This particular plant started growing some ten or twelve years ago from a piece of stem broken from a well developed plant.

The stems, or leaves, root easily in a drinking glass or clear glass jar of water. It is necessary to support the stems as they are quite unable to support the leaves that develop.

The buds take up to a month to develop and open, but are well worth waiting for. A plant must reach the age of several years before buds appear.

Buds begin to open at dusk and are fully open by midnight, but wilt when broad daylight reaches them.

The scent from the blossoms seems to come in waves.

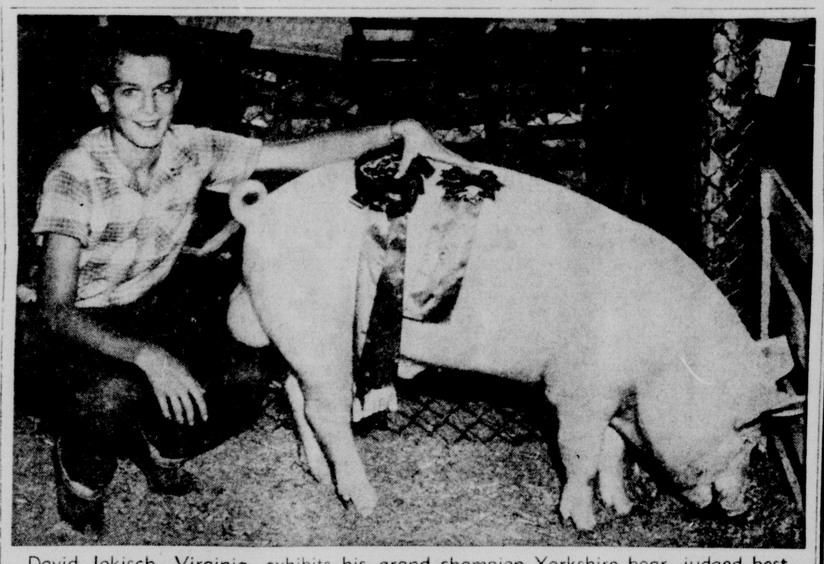

Several years ago this plant had five blooms in one night and three the following. So far this year twelve buds have opened: four early in July (three in one night) one the next night and last Saturday night, Aug. 22, five blooms and Sunday night, Aug. 23, three blooms. There are at present a number of buds developing.

Usually only one bloom will develop from a leaf, but at the present time there are two leaves each with two buds, about three inches long.

"It will be interesting to see whether one leaf can develop two fully developed flowers," Mrs. Drennan states.

The Night Blooming Cereus is sometimes called Orchid Cactus, or Honolulu Queen Cactus. The tropical plant is found in great profusion in Guatemala, where it is frequently used for hedges.

Wheat Surplus Will Continue Increasing

By DILLON GRAHAM

WASHINGTON (AP) — The current record wheat surplus will continue to increase for two years or more, the Agriculture Department estimated today.

The wheat carryover on next July 1 will be about 1,370,000,000 bushels, the department said, and will hit another new high the following year.

Yields at the average of recent years would result in a larger crop in 1960 than likely would be used for domestic consumption and export, the department said, thus adding to the surplus.

The department estimated the total U. S. wheat supply for the 1959-60 marketing year, which began last July 1, at 2,404,000,000 bushels. This is an all-time high—about 53 million bushels above last year's record, and 533 million bushels—or 29 per cent—more than in 1957-58. A 45 per cent increase in the carryover from last year more than offset the reduction in the crop.

This year's supply, the department said, consists of the July 1 carryover of 1,277,000,000 bushels, the crop estimated as of Aug. 1 at 1,119,000,000 bushels, and an allowance for imports of about eight million bushels.

Domestic consumption in 1959-60 was estimated at about 626 million bushels, slightly below a year ago. This would leave about 1,778,000,000 bushels for export.

The prospective carryover on July 1, 1960, would be more than five times the 25 million bushels in 1952, when Korean wartime demands had drawn wheat stocks down to low levels.

Concerning prices, the department's wheat report said:

"U. S. wheat prices have been generally strong relative to the support level early this marketing year. This reflects withholding of wheat from market and reduced production from the record level of last year. Quantities not eligible for price support, because of seedings in excess of allotments, are much less than those for the 1958 crop, which were above any previous year.

"As in recent years, prices are expected to strengthen after the heavy movement slackens following harvest but the increase is likely to be less than last year. Reflecting the early season strength in market prices, the U.S. price to farmers in 1959-60 may average slightly higher than the $1.72 for last year, even though the support price of $1.81 is down one cent."

The 1958 corn crop, the biggest ever produced, will be just about matched by consumption, reports a University of Illinois agricultural outlook specialist.

All cattle are susceptible to anaplasmosis. It is usually severe in mature cattle, especially cow herds, but mild in calves.

Brave Little Rebel

Chap. 22: Surprise For Emmy Lou

And then over the thunderous noise of the clattering hoofbeats, she heard it!!!! The high sweet notes of an army bugle tore across the prairie toward her!!

"Soldiers! Soldiers!" she cried aloud. "They are soldiers!" she repeated in hysterical happiness.

From the distant ranks of riders, one blue clad rider detached himself and rode rapidly toward her. She had been seen! She had been seen! Someone was coming to help her!

"Oh, Simon," she exclaimed, as if her words would fly to him, "I'm going to find help for you now! We're safe! We're safe!"

As the rider approached, Lone Star slowed his pace. At last he stopped, trembling and expectant, like a soldier at attention.

Knows Rider

Then Emmy Lou recognized the rider! It was her own father!

"Daddy!" she cried. "Daddy! Daddy! Daddy!" she sobbed through her tears. "It's really you!"

Happy Safety

Emmy Lou stirred in her sleep. The large brass buttons on her father's tunic cut into her cheeks, but she lay quietly against him, happy in her new-found safety. Behind her father's horse, she could hear the squeak and scrape of wagon wheels as they rolled across the uneven ground, carrying the sleeping Simon.

"Poor Simon, dear Simon," she thought tenderly, "soon we will be in the fort, and Mother will care for him."

She stirred again and snuggled closer to her father, who tightened his arms protectingly about her chubby body. Fondly he kissed her tangled curls and drew his coat more closely around her.

"How lucky she was!" thought Emmy Lou. "Out of all the people she could have met on this lonely prairie, it was her own father who had found her!"

Rescue For Simon

When the first joys of meeting had passed, Emmy Lou had told her father of Simon's painful accident. Motioning his men to follow him on down the creek, he had assured her that Simon would be rescued at once, and taken to the fort where proper care could be given to his injury.

The miles had passed quickly as they rejoined her little friend. Simon had been relieved and overjoyed to see friends, and help come.

Gently the soldiers placed Simon in the back of a small supply wagon on a bed of uniforms and blankets. He had been given a sleeping pill, so that he now slept peacefully through the bumping, jolting journey back to the fort.

"Ta-Ta-Ta-" the bugle blared.

Emmy Lou stirred and opened her eyes, wide awake now. She looked up questioningly into her father's face.

"It's all right, Honey," he soother. "We're coming into the fort."

Next: ANOTHER SURPRISE.

Let's Go Birding

White and Blue

By Emma Mae Leonhard

This is the second article on the subject of superlative beauty in the bird world. The first one, you may recall, concerned the Roseate Spoonbill and sunset.

This story will present to you a memorable scene of a great colony of Sooty Terns in the Gulf of Mexico.

Twenty-three of us had sailed with the Navy from Key West, Florida, to the Dry Tortugas, inaccessible by public transportation. They are seven small salt-water islands lying about 70 miles west of Key West.

We landed on Garden Key. Nearby lies Bird Key, a very small coral island, the only nesting locality of Sooty and Noddy Terns in North America, we were told. The Sooties nest on the clear, sandy beach; the Noddies, in the growth and shrubbery in the center of the Key.

Although members of the Audubon group who had been taken to the Dry Tortugas to see these colonies of terns had not been permitted to set foot on Bird Key, we who were interested in birds were fortunate enough to be allowed to land and walk along the beach. Five of us at a time were carried in a small government launch by the Warden from Garden Key to Bird Key.

Fuzzy Babies

As we walked along the edge of the beach, we passed hundreds of terns sitting one against the other on the sand — adults and fuzzy babies, young birds of all stages; we saw eggs lying in depressions made in the sand by the birds' claws; we also saw mother terns sitting on their eggs, usually one egg to a nest. Right above us flew dozens of terns, over us and around us, on our right and on our left; in fact, we were in a cloud of terns.

We agree with you that Sooty Tern is not a very pretty name for this beautiful bird. It has, perhaps, never seen the soot of our industrialized areas; it also has probably never fed nor bathed in the mud and mirk of fresh water streams and marshes. Instead, it drinks sea water; it bathes in the clean salt water; it feeds upon small salt-water fish of various kinds.

Why Called Sooty?

Why then is it called the Sooty Tern? It is the only tern that is black above and white below; its cheeks and patch on the forehead are white; its bill and feet are black. The black-and-white pattern of the Sooty Tern is clean-cut as the 15-17-inch graceful bird sails and dips and circles freely and fearlessly between the sky and the sea—a sprite of the elements.

Regretfully we had to leave this wonder place, but not before the unexpected happened. During the sailing we had seen water spouts, gigantic storm clouds ripped by lightning, and blue sky above us—practically all the freaks of sea and sky; we were already familiar with them.

But the scene of black-and-white birds between the sea and the sky changed: the sun shown from a clear blue spot in the sky down upon the flying terns; the white of these Sooties changed to a clear blue. Yes, the blue of the sea was reflecting in the white of each flying Sooty; each bird seemed a part of the blue sea, the blue sunny spot and the black storm clouds in the sky.

We few birders in the group gazed at this metamorphosis, and sailed away with wonder and confidence into the white-capped, storm-battered Gulf of Mexico.

Central Christian Church History

TWO CHURCHES

Rev. Russell's pastoral year ended September 30, 1858 and he was called as pastor for another year. On October 1, 1859, the church divided into two separate groups.

By this time a second house of worship had been built. It was located on Beardstown Street (now North Main Street).

Those who withdrew from the church held to the same fundamental beliefs as the main church.

One group returned to the County Court House as their place of worship. Both churches called themselves "the Church of Christ" although one was designated the "Brethren, meeting in the Court House" and the other "Congregation Meeting on Beardstown St." Rev. Russell remained the minister of one group until he died in 1863.

WANTS TO BE FARMER

I like farming because I like to see things grow. I'd like to be my own boss. I'd also like to make my own plans.

I'd be proud to know that I'd help this great country grow.

War In The Front Yard

By Walter B. Hendrickson Jr.

TOUGH FIGHT

By Walter B. Hendrickson Jr.

As usual, the red ant army took the black ant nest by surprise as the black ants could not organize their defenses in time to stop the red ants on top of the nest. Instead the black ants had to resort to blocking up the holes, after the red ants entered, and fighting them inside the nest.

Whenever the red ants made their way through the black ant defense, the black ants moved the eggs farther away from the battle zone.

Once a red ant managed to get into the nest he seemed to think he had accomplished his mission, even if he couldn't get to the eggs, so he went home. When the red ants arrived back at the nest, each found that the war was still going on so they went back to the black ant nest.

About half way between the black and red ant nest a small band of large black ants attacked the few red ants who were carrying eggs home. The large black ants stole the eggs from the red ants and killed the red ants if they objected too vigorously.

Even though the large black ants were twice as big as red ants they still had a hard time killing them because the red ants could maneuver much easier than they could. When a large black ant got an egg away from a red ant he carried it back to his own nest.

Eat Eggs

When the large black ants got the eggs home they probably used them for food because they had all the different types of ant power they needed.

Finally, when the sun set, the red ant's battle fever dropped as the temperature dropped so they all returned to their nest for the night. Since they didn't get nearly as many eggs as they could expect from such a large nest, the red ants went back the next day to fight until the war was won by one colony or the other.

We'll tell you about this victory next time.

Vacuum Tubes Again

By this time you readers will note that often the exam questions pointed out for study at the end of each week cover directly (or indirectly) the material just studied.

It does you little good simply to memorize the answers to these questions. It is far better to know what each one is all about.

Present day electronic gear uses many different types of vacuum tubes and each performs a specific service. Likewise a dual or triple tube will perform more than one job of course.

The so-called Grid voltage versus plate current curve is the method used to show the operating positions of any particular tube between Saturation on the top and end of the curve and Cut-Off on the lower end. Thus the applied grid bias voltage and plate current when placed on the tube's chart (each tube has its own characteristic curve of operation) determines whether that particular tube is being operated in any of the following ways: A, A1, AB1, AB2, B, or C.

For example, the class A and similar tube must operate along the central portion (Liner Portion) of this grid voltage—plate current curve; this is, the grid bias voltage and the amount of plate current flowing through the tube must be adjusted until the tube will be operating linierly. Therefore the output of the tube will be a faithful reproduction of the signal put into it.

Study Program

We might continue on like this: Mon: Handbook, PP—70, including "Cathode Followers." Tues: R.T.-M.—"Tetrodes, Pentodes, Beam-Power, Multi-Electrode, & Multi-Unit Tubes."

Wed: Handbook, PP 70—72, Cathodes, grid bias, screens, etc. Thurs: As review, re-read "Electron Tube Characteristics." This is found in front part of R.T.M.

Fri. Round up and carefully dissemble one each of the following types of tubes for observational purposes. (Any older no longer useful tube will do.)—Diode, Triode—single & dual), Beam Tetrode, Pentode, Mixer Pentagrid, Twin Diode & Triode. Sat: Study General License Exam question number 19 and review some of the others already covered.

Code Practice

This week try code practice this way: Mon: Practice "P.C.G." column No. 4 (across the page). Tues: Copy WLAW at both 10 & 15 WPM. Wed. Take any straight text at random and practice at a speed just a bit faster than is easy for you. (Surely one should be up to at least 10 W.P.M. or better by now.) Thurs: Copy WLAW again at both 10 & 15 W.P.M. again. Fri. Using teletype at around 10 W.P.M. or better, run the dual code speed test (both sending and receiving for 5 minutes each); ascertain your present speed, and number of errors.

How does it compare with the other test? Better we hope! Sat: Take a well earned break!

Vacation is fun, but isn't it good to get back to school again? It certainly is if you have (and you probably do) a cheerful teacher like this one drawn by David Bergschneider, age 7, of Waverly.

If you like to draw, look around you (or into your imagination) and make a picture—just 4 inches square and all your own work—and send it to the Jacksonville Junior Journal-Courier with your name, address, and age.

MOUNTAIN ASH

By Rip Barnsdall

The fruit of this tree is a bright orange-red. They (the fruits) look like tiny pears and are quite bitter. Birds eat them only when they can get no other food.

Igneous Rocks

Igneous rocks are formed by heat, pressure, and volcanic action.

When the earth gets very hot inside, a volcano is formed. Then lava, hot ashes, and cinders fly into the air in showers while they are still very hot. When they cool they gather up many particles of dust and other particles which help to make the rocks. When they start to cool they get harder and this forms rock.

There are many different kinds of igneous rocks. Some are granite, basalt, tuff, obsidan, and many others.

Igneous rocks come from volcanoes, so you could look for igneous rocks in or near inactive volcanoes.

Since you can find all kinds of rocks in gravel pits, you should be able to find igneous rocks there, too.

To help you identify igneous rocks, you need their colors. Granite is pink; pumice is gray or black and often floats; basalt is green or brown.

Igneous rocks have many uses. Granite, an igneous rock, is used for all kinds of buildings and statues.

Basalt is used for the making of many roads, especially in Mexico.

Pumice is used for scouring powder and other cleansers.

Did you know that Mauna Loa is not the highest volcanoe in Hawaii?

It is the most famous, and has one of the world's largest craters on its side, but Mauna Kea is higher.

JUMP IN MINOR LEADS TO SLAM

BY OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

One of the simplest of the modern American bidding developments has been the use of the jump raise in a minor suit as a strong but non-forcing bid.

Opening lead—♥ K

Today's hand shows how Bob and Joe Sharp of Covington, Ky., used it to get to an effortless slam.

With eight high-card points and six good clubs, Jo, sitting North, had a minimum hand for the jump raise but her husband had enough strength to take full command. He simply used Blackwood to make sure that Jo held an ace and then bid six clubs.

Against the king of hearts opening Bob made seven in spite of the three-zero trump break. He simply won that first trick, ruffed a heart with the ace of trumps, led a trump to dummy's ten, ruffed the last heart with the king of trumps and then ran off all of dummy's trumps.

East made the mistake of throwing a couple of spades on the trump leads whereupon Bob got rid of all his diamonds and made all four of his spades.

What do you do?

A—Bid three no-trump. You have 14 points and good spades but the hand does not at all look slammish.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Instead of bidding two diamonds over your two clubs your partner has jumped to three diamonds. What do you do now?

Roodhouse Man To Visit School Science Classes

ROODHOUSE — Twenty-nine science teachers are spending the summer in Oak Ridge, Tenn., where they are receiving training as travelling science teachers. They tour the country, visiting high schools in 48 states, give lectures demonstrations before science classes, confer with teachers and administrators, and generally further the cause of science education.

WILLIAM RUSSELL

In this group is William Russell of Roodhouse. He is a former local teacher and son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Russell, 1825 S. Main Street, Jacksonville. Mr. Russell's family resides in Roodhouse.

He will work as a science consultant with the State of Illinois Department of Public Instruction Sept. 21.

When the program was conceived four years ago, seven teachers undertook the unusual assignment. The success of the activity was so great that the number of teachers expanded to ten the second year, and nineteen the third year.

The Oak Ridge teachers are receiving their training at ORINS (Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies), which originated the program, under the sponsorship of the National Science Foundation, in cooperation with the Atomic Energy Commission.

Under the arrangement conceived last year, sixteen of the teachers are teachers at large, that is, they will travel to schools on national itineraries regardless of state boundaries. The remaining thirteen teachers are supported by individual states and will travel within their own states.

Mother, Two Sons Paroled From Prison Plan New Life Together

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Two young Negroes who practically grew up in prison were reunited with their mother Friday as all three were released under parole.

Rosa Lee Ingraham, 54, and the sons, Sammy Lee, now 25, and Wallace, 27, had served 11 years for the slaying of John Stratford, a 66-year-old white tenant farmer.

As she walked from the Colony prison farm at Milledgeville, Ga., Mrs. Ingram declared, "The burden has done fell off me. I feel like I can live happy now—me and my children."

In an interview after the arrival at the home here of Dr. C.R. Yates, a Negro druggist, Wallace said the news he was going to be freed made him "feel wonderful."

Both young men said they had learned to do a number of things while in prison. Wallace has been cooking and Sammy Lee worked in a dairy and ran a "store" on the side. He revealed he had accumulated $250 profits from his store—actually a box containing such articles as candy, chewing tobacco and cigarettes.

Because of Sammy Lee's apparent business acumen, Yates said the youth probably would be put to work in one of the Yates drugstores.

Wallace probably will be employed by the Negro YMCA. W.R. Cochran, executive secretary of the Butler St. branch, said Wallace is expected to take over custodial duties of a new building and, because of his cooking ability to run a small eating place.

Those who aided in gaining a parole for the Ingrams declared their intention to allow the mother and her sons to fade into private life.

"They will not be exploited," said Mrs. Yates, wife of the druggist. It was her determination that kept alive the hopes of her husband and others who were working to free the Ingrams.

"We're asking that there be no public appearances or speeches," she said. "We think they should be allowed to drop out of the public eye."

The Ingrams first were sentenced to death for the 1947 killing, which followed an argument over a straying mule. The sentences were commuted to life imprisonment amid a great deal of agitation from all parts of the country.

As I See It

by E. W. BROWN

It's like the fellow says . . . there ought to be a "Parents' Emancipation Day" listed on the September calendar along about the time young America goes back to school. Nobody yet has coined a short and complete answer to a child's summertime quiz, "What can I do?" You may have a short answer, but often it isn't a practical one. And even the most ingenious parent is bound to repeat himself (or herself), or to come up with a solution about as palatable to the very much younger set as a bowl of cold spinach. Of course there were camps and playgrounds that took up some of the slack . . . but did you ever see so much slack? But now the summer is winding up, and the school bell will sound like a modern Liberty Bell in many homes. Relax.

Has anyone stopped to think what'll happen if Krushchev decides he doesn't want to go back to Russia? It could happen. And serious accidents are more apt to happen when your brakes are faulty. If your brakes are "squealing" when used, rivets or other metal parts are cutting into the brake drum. Avoid extra expense and possible accidents by having your brakes inspected in our service department. E. W. Brown, 406 South Main. Phone 5-4333.

Mary Ann Mobley

Mary Ann Mobley In Regal Gown To Reign Over Miss America Pageant Finals Sept. 12

Atlantic City, N. J.—Miss America 1959, Mary Ann Mobley, of Brandon, Miss., will reign over the Miss America Pageant here September 8 through 12 wearing a gown as breathtaking as any girl ever dreamed of having.

In keeping with the Pageant's "Dreamland" theme, Miss America will rule over the 54 "goddesses" of Dreamland—the contestants who will be competing for her crown, the $10,000 first prize scholarship, and some $80,000 in personal appearance contracts—in a creation by the young American fashion designer, Al Bosand.

Miss America, while owning some $5,000 worth of gowns presented to her by the Pageant scholarship contributing firm of Joseph Bancroft and Sons Co., of Wilmington, Del., is eagerly awaiting her chance to wear the stunning creation for her Pageant appearances.

Lace and Velvet Gown

Bosand's gown, styled in a colonial motif in tribute to Mary Ann's representation of her home state of Mississippi, is of white ban-lon lace and pink everglaze velvet, combined into a dreamlike gown to emphasize today's young American woman in all her radiant beauty.

The gown is embroidered with thousands of pearls and sequins, and will literally sparkle when it is seen by the thousands of spectators who will witness the four nights of contest judging in this resort's Convention Hall, and by additional millions who will watch the two-hour live telecast of the climax of the contest—the crowning of Miss America 1960—on a nation-wide CBS-TV network beginning at 10 p.m. (EDT) on September 12.

Every State Represented

For the first time in the history of the annual September beauty and talent contest, every state in the Union will be represented by a contestant this year. In addition, girls representing Canada and the cities of New York, Chicago and Washington, D. C., will bring the total of contestants to 54.

The new Miss America will see, upon her arrival in Atlantic City as a contestant, the first fabulous evening gown from her 1960 Miss America wardrobe. The gown is now being designed by Bosand, and will be awaiting its wearer as soon as she is crowned on the vast Convention Hall stage near midnight on September 12.

The gown for the nation's new beauty queen will be on display for the 54 contest hopefuls during the week of competition, and is certain to add additional inspiration to each of the beauties during the judging here.

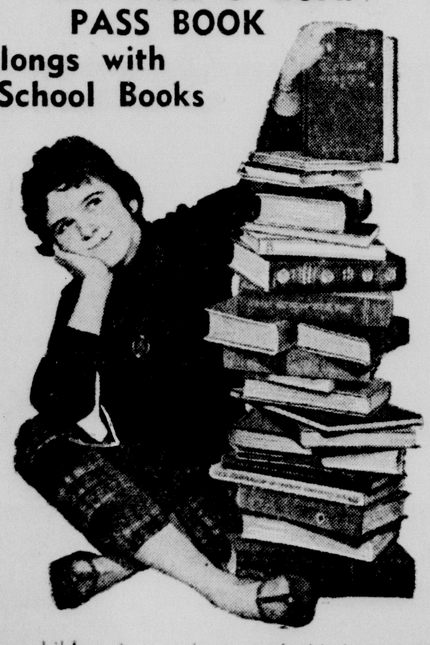

Suzanne Ingebrog Johnson from the Chicago area was named Miss Illinois in the Pageant held last June at Moline. At that time Miss Jacksonville (Beverly Bray) received a one hundred dollar scholarship after being named Miss Congeniality of the Pageant.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce chapters sponsor Pageants in Illinois. The 1958 Pageant was held in Jacksonville.

Beverly is presently visiting an uncle, Fred Johnson, and family, at Eldorado, Kansas. She will become a student this fall at Millikin University in Decatur.

Miss Bray has made a number of personal appearances this year as Miss Jacksonville escorted by different members of the local Junior Chamber of Commerce. She represented Jacksonville at the Winchester Burgoo and the Woodson centennial to name a few of her recent appearances.

Every man he had so far met with here had looked him over with sullen, suspicious wariness and then left him severely alone. Nor was Vince Tendler the same man he had been. Now he was rough, short of temper, and consumed with a certain malign purpose which locked him away in a savage indifference. All of which worried Stack Coulter and made him fearful.

In this kind of world he knew he would never find any ease again; too much of it was based on outlawry and destruction. As for instance the thing looming in the immediate future, the thing that might come of any given night—even this one just ahead—the raid on Reservation to get that deputy, Grady Haskell.

Rutt Dubison had made it plain that he moved in no other direction until this little item of business had been taken care of, and Vince Tendler had agreed. And Stack Coulter knew that here was something he wanted no part of, no part at all. Rutt Dubison and Vince Tendler might not care what the sure consequences of such a raid would be, Dubison and his followers being all renegade anyhow, and Tendler willing to go to any extreme to buy Dubison's support in an all-out strike against Hayfork. But he, Stack Coulter, had his own future to consider.

As yet, he had committed no actual crime that could turn the law and public conscience entirely against him. But just let him participate in an armed raid on Reservation, regardless of cause or purpose and forever more he would be one of the hunted.

Sudden eagerness straightened Coulter's back and put a gleam in his eye. Real security was not here or never would be. Real security was back in that other world he'd been stupid enough to leave; back at Hayfork headquarters where those good men rode, and at Reservation where other good men like Jim Kineen and Amos Potter and Milo Jellick bespoke the voice of the town and where a deputy sheriff named Grady Haskell walked the street and threw a shadow far higher and wider than Vince Tendler or Rutt Dubison ever had.

• • •

How could he regain that security now so suddenly precious? How more simply, Coulter reasoned, than by carrying word of the intended raid to Grady Haskell and the citizens of town. This must surely return him to the good graces of all worthwhile people—even regain him a place on the Hayfork crew again.

He buckled on his gunbelt and donned his hat. From his warbag he pocketed what odds and ends he could carry with him without arousing suspicion in case he met up with one of the Beaverhead crowd over at the corrals. Until he was clear of and well away from this place, it was smart to make every move as casual and innocent appearing as possible.

Even so, as sauntering he circled to the corrals which stood off a little distance to the east, the sweat of tension stung his face and his head swung and his eyes darted, back and forth and round about. He reached the corrals without incident, neither meeting or seeing anyone.

Afterwards he moved swiftly, catching and saddling. He led his horse back into the edge of the timber before mounting. He rode a fairly wide circle through the timber to strike the old military road well to the east, and once on this, with a surge of exulting relief, he spurred for the head of Reservation Canyon and the trail which cut down the west rim of it to the town far distant below.

The moment Stack Coulter disappeared in the timber, a man stepped from behind an old log feed shed, to catch and saddle even more swiftly than Coulter had done. It was one of the things which marked Frank Gentile, the cat-like ease and swiftness with which he could move. A dark, smooth-faced man of medium size, he was one whose every action and look held that feline quality. He had pale, blank, unrevealing eyes, glowing far back with the flame of an instinctive, killing cruelty.

Once in the saddle, he dropped down slope from headquarters, striking a narrow east-west trail, then spurring east along it at a driving run.

• • •

By the time Stack Coulter reached the head of Reservation Canyon and started down the rim trail with no sound or sign of pursuit or alarm stirring behind him, he felt he'd won his gamble. Every step his horse took was carrying him that much closer to security, and so his confidence grew to the point where he slowed his mount to a walk while he spun up another smoke. As he completed this his horse abruptly stopped, and Coulter looked up to find another rider blocking the trail ahead, a dark, smooth-faced rider up on a horse still blowing from hard running. A man with blank, cruel, feline eyes.

Coulter named him with a dismayed ejaculation.

"Gentile!"

Moving mechanically, Stack Coulter went to put his cigarette in his mouth, but the sudden desperate tension in his fingers crumpled the cigarette into a fluff of tobacco grains and fragmented brown paper.

"Got restless—laying around." The words came jerkily, tight and strained in his throat. "Just thought I'd take a little ride."

He tried to keep both his glance and his voice steady.

NEW YORK (AP)—Forty million of us still have a chance of getting better paid for being thrifty.

Congress hasn't yet slammed the door on the proposal of the secretary of the Treasury that the return on savings bonds — 4½ billion dollars worth held by the 40 million persons — should be raised to 3¾ per cent from the present legal limit of 3¼ per cent.

Most of the 40 million holders are voters.

The Treasury says the cost of living is tied up with its proposal, as well as giving the 40 million a better deal.

In each of the last four months the Treasury has had to pay out more cash in redeeming series E and H bonds than it got from the sale of new ones.

It got the cash — for this and other pressing needs — by borrowing from other investors in the short-term market. The last such borrowing cost it 3.82 per cent.

The Treasury calls these short-term issues inflationary — thus adding to the pressure for further hikes in the cost of living — because holders treat the Treasury bills about like cash, due to their being paid off in such a short time. The Treasury holds that the effect is almost the same as if it just added to the money supply by printing greenbacks.

But when you buy a savings bond you put it away, and in the past most of you have held onto the bond until maturity because that's the only way to get the full 3¼ per cent return on your savings.

This is regarded as having no inflationary implications as the Treasury's short-term borrowing has. The Treasury wishes you would buy more savings bonds and stop redeeming so many before they mature.

The reason you've been redeeming them and slackening up on your purchases is simple. You can get a bigger return than 3¼ per cent in many banks and savings & loan associations — and still higher than that in some other forms of investment.

In his plea to Congress this week to lift the ceiling on savings bond interest rates, and also on marketable Treasury bonds of five years or more maturity, President Eisenhower took note of another reason many persons have gone sour on savings bonds.

Many are painfully aware that the $75 they put into the bond eight or more years ago could buy as much or more then as the $100 they will get now as it matures.

And the President says that if the Treasury can't sell long-term bonds in today's money market, where demand for funds has pushed yields well above the 4¼ per cent legal interest limit, it will have to do all its financing in the short-term market with all the inflation that implies.

In addition to its needs for new cash, the Treasury must refund many issues coming due. Altogether it will have to go into the money market in the next 12 months for some 85 billion dollars. It will have to pay the going rate of interest. And if all the borrowing is done in the short-term market, interest rates will rise even more — and more government paper looked upon as the next thing to cash could erode the dollar's purchasing power still further.

The President says this isn't fair to the holders of savings bonds or to the thrifty American putting his money into other forms of savings.

RELIGION TODAY

By TOM HENSHAW
AP Religion Writer

Church leaders who have been outspoken against the visit of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev to the United States were taken to task last week by the influential weekly magazine "The Lutheran."

The Rev. Dr. Albert P. Stauderman, associate editor, in an editorial questioned whether churchly critics of the visit "lack all confidence in the redeeming and converting power of the Christian faith."

"The proposed exchange of visits between President Eisenhower and Premier Khrushchev is an example of (a) more mature attitude" in international relations, wrote the Rev. Dr. Stauderman.

"If each side can make its position clear to the other, there's a workable chance for an agreeable decision. The only alternative is desperate conflict which, with modern weapons, could destroy civilization.

"In view of this, it's hard to understand the attitude of some Roman Catholic bishops and some fundamentalist fanatics who are trying to stir up opposition to Mr. K's visit.

"Of course, a few visits between statesmen won't end tensions that have built up over the years. The most we can hope for is mutual understanding that will enable the world to live in peace.

"Once that is achieved, more complete world brotherhood can come in only one way — through the power of the Gospel."

Two of the leading critics of the Khrushchev visit have been Richard Cardinal Cushing, Roman Catholic archbishop of Boston, and the Rev. Dr. Clyde J. Kennedy, president of the fundamentalist American Council of Christian Churches.

Some churchmen, while viewing the visit with something short of world enthusiasm, see it as an opportunity for Americans to show the Soviet leader their religious life—for whatever good it will do.

Evangelist Billy Graham, who visited the Soviet Union this summer, has suggested that President Eisenhower should take Khrushchev to church while he is here.
